Mr Lawson, will argue that maintenance of the 3 per cent target will mean that defence would have to take more resources at the expense of areas like health and education.

Mr Heseltine, however, will put up a tough fight, boosted by his success, against Treasury opposition, in getting the Cabinet to back British technology with the £250m order for the new Air-Launched Anti-Radar Missile (ALARM) for the Royal Air Force rather than the American High Speed Anti-Radition Missile (HARM).

As the Pope left the aircraft, the band of the Garde Republicaine played the Vatican national anthem, followed by the "Marseillaise". Ecclesiasti-cal dignitaries. Government ministers, members of the Senate and the National Assembly, and mayors were also at the airport.

In his welcome M Mitterrand said he saluted in the papacy "an institution that has marked profoundly all of history," and particularly that of France. The Pope had made his own "the great causes of peace, solidarity and justice.

The Pope, in turn, said the French people - both Christian and non-Christian - stood for "liberty, equality and peace among all the world's peoples." Children presented the Pope with bouquets of flowers in the papal colours of pale yellow and gold before he and M Mitterrand left by helicopter for a onehour private meeting at the prefecture of Tarbes, formerly

Cram wins gold on last day at Helsinki

By Our Sports Staff

The world athletics cham-pionships in Helsinki ended on a triumphant note for Britain yesterday when Steve Cram won the gold medal in the 1,500 metres. Cram, aged 22, took the lead with 200 metres to go and withstood the challenges of the American, Steve Scott, who was second, and of Said Aquita, of Morocco, who was third. Fourth was Britain's other finalist, Steve Ovett, who lost his chance of a medal whem boxed in at the start of the last Cram's victory completes his emergence from the shadons of Ovett, the world record holder, and Schastian Coe, who was absent from the championships because of illness. Cram won the European and Commonwealth titles last year.

Britain also wom two bronze medals yesterday. In the women's 200 metres Kathy Cook finished third behind Marita Koch, of East Germany, and the Jamaican, Marlene Ottey, and the relay team of Ainsley Bennett, Garry Cook. Todd Bennett and Philip Brown took third place in the men's 4 x 400 metres. Their success owed much to a

Before the airline can be sold to the private sector, Sir John has repeatedly said, it needs to be making profits at a rate of at least £250m a year. That compares with profits of only £77m announced in June for the 1982-83 financial year, and a loss of £544m the year before

But with the world's airlines rapidly returning to profitability as a result of drastic cost cutting and an rise in demand as the world pulls out of recession. such an improvement is quite ment is keen that the airline be denationalized as soon as possible. Sir John said he was in no panic" about that being delayed until 1985. "I do not think there is any great urgency about 1984. My job was to get the airline ready, which I will have done. The actual timing is a matter for the Government.

A considerable amount of work still needs to be done to put the airline's finances in order and to alleviate the £1bn burden of debt. Sir John denied that he was asking the Government to write off all or part of this debt, but said that he had to negotiate a form of bridging loan which would then be repaid out of the proceeds of the Sir John's optimism contrasted strongly with a policy statement from the TUC published today. It says that Britain may not have a viable acrospace industry in 10 years, if the Government fails to take a number of strategic decisions TUC leaders have called on the Cabinet and British Airways the new high-technology Airbus A320 and to make rapid decisions to avoid tens of thousands of redundancies.

The TUC remains bitterly hostile to the denationalization of British Aerospace.

Sir John King repeated vesterday that he had no intention of buying the A320 at this time. "A decision will be taken at the end of this menth. But the A320 remains a paper aeroplane. I am not in the business of launching a new plane. I have had enough trouble launching this airline he said. He did not rule out a purchase of the aircraft sometime in the future, however.

Gamblers Anonymous is to set up a junior branch for children addicted to playing gaming machines. The decision was made yesterday after the organization was told that there had been an "explosion" over the past 12 months in the number of youngsters hooked on gaming machines

It approved the scheme at its national conference in Birming-ham. Members feared youngsters might feel that their problems were not that serious they attended ordinary meetings and heard adults talking about losing huge sums

The conference also gave the go-ahead for a parents branch of the sister organization, Gam Anon, which helps the relatives of gamblers.

Delegates decided to issue new teaching pack for schools warning of the dangers of gaming machines and they also told parents to look out for signs that children were gambling, such as a constant need for money, the disappearance of valuables from the house and unsociable behaviour.

The organization said: "We have had hundreds of calls for help from parents who are worried their children have become addicted to these

Chinese told of illegal trade in panda skins

London had been given a report which strongly suggests that there is an illegal trade in the skins of giant pandas, in spite of the lengths to which the Chinese have gone to protect the animals. The trade in one of the world's most threatened species, came to light after a letter sent to the Birmingham Museum and Art Gallery from Taiwan offering panda skins for sale was passed to the Flora and Fauna Preservation Society. The society's executive secretary, Mr John Burton, then wrote to Mr Maurice Wang of the Rucy Pin Trading Company in Taiwan, posing as the director of an animal collector had paid £34,000 for a skin and that two more were

The newspaper and the society have passed the details to the Chinese Embassy which met a delegation led by Sir Peter Scott, the Preservation Society's chairman, last week. Mr Burton said the embassy was clearly taking the matter "very, very seriously." Only about 1,000 pandas are thought to survive in the wild in China and they are threatened by a shortage of their staple diet, bamboo. Mr Burton said the society had no idea before the letter reached them that pands skins were being traded. From photo-graphs and descriptions of the skins, he said, he was reasonably confident that the

Heatwave kills hundreds of birds

By A Staff Reporter

The hot weather has killed many water-based birds in several parts of Britain. The sun and the lack of rain have caused the spread of botulism, which attacks their nervous systems. The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds said yester-day that it had been a very bad year for some birds. Last week more than 100 wildfowl at the Attenborough Nature Reserve. Nottingham, became the latest casualties of Britain's hottest summer since 1976.

Similar incidents have been reported by the Society in Norfolk and in Regent's Park. central London. On the boating lake in Regent's Park about 200 ducks and swans have died and in Norfolk about 130 birds. including gulls, mallards, geese and coots have perished.

Mr Tim Stowe of the society explained that botulism causes paralysis which affects the birds winsg, necks and legs and they waste away through their inability to feed and water. He said that the affected birds are those which live in normally wet areas with fairly dense vegetation. They become breeding grounds for botulism when the water table is lowered. The Thames estuary. Mersey estuary. Firth of Forth and parts of Norfolk, where shallow water can be found close to effluent pipes and rubbish tips, are bad areas for botulism.

While Britain's birdlife is suffering, the heat has proved a blessing to other wildlife.
The Royal Society for Nature Conservation notes that there have been far more butterflies than usual. Swarms of clouded yellows, painted ladies, red admirals, peacocks and tortoise-shells have been seen throughout the countryside.

Sea swimmers have been stung by Portuguese man o'war jellyfish, which have drifted into British waters. Large numbers of shark have been seen off the Dorset and Devon coasts. A 24ft basking shark was seen in a Dorset bay.

One benefit of a hot summer is that many sub-tropical birds are attracted to British shores. For the first time in 40 years a block-winged still was spotted on a reserve in East Anglia.

@ Wild geese invading farms in search of food are damaging crops in East Anglia, according to the Country Landowners Association.

Landowners in Norfolk say that geese have become an absolute menace to winter cereals, grass and vegetables. They are demanding a cull.

Death Row wife's appeal for life By Richard Evans official is expected to attend the appeal. Mrs Smith, born in east London emigrated to South África in 1975 shortly after marrying her third husband, Mr Roger Smith, in Brentwood, Essex. Mr Smith, a quantity surveyor, was stabbed to death in the back garden of their Johannesburg home last July. Mrs Smith was sentenced to drath after the court was told that she and other members of her family had spent months plotting her husband's death because he refused to give her a divorce, Mrs Smith's chauffeur, Jack Ramogale, and David Maguni, who killed Mr Smith, were also sentenced to hang.

Ramonale, aged 25, was said to have been offered 500 rand (£275) by Mrs Smith to find a killer, and Mnguni, aged 35, was promised 10,000 rand (£5,500) for the killing. Their appeals against sentence will also be heard tomorrow.

Mrs Smith, who has spent 265 days in prison awaiting tomorrow's appeal, will be represented by Mr Douglas Shaw, QC, one of South Africa's leading lawyers. He is likely to seek leave to introduce new evidence from statements made in London by Mrs Smith's father, Mr Harry Mullucks. It was alleged during the trial that Mr Muliucks, an East Ham insurance assessor, had suggested sending "hea-vies" from England to kill Mr Smith. Mr Mullucks, aged 71, has made sworn affidavits detailing his knowledge and involvement in events prior to Mr Smith's death.

If the court agrees receive new evidence it will probably authorize a special hearing in London where Mr Mulincks would give evidence and face cross-examination. Mr Mullucks had wanted to fly to South Africa to give evidence at his daughter's trial, but he was refused immunity from possible pros-

Durban-based solicitor, saw Mrs Smith on Friday. He said afterwards: "She is very anxious, very nervous and very concerned. Her thinking on all matters is not perfectly coherent. She has been under enormous strain, not only because of her sentence, but the strain of being where she is

Mr Downes added that Mrs Smith's prospects in the appeal were "sound".

If Mrs Smith's appeal fails, a plea for clemency will be submitted to the state president. In theory, he alone would decide whether Mrs Smith should hang. But in practice the South African Cabinet would almost certainly make the final decision.

Russians adamant over boy 'defector'

From Christopher Thomas Washington

The Soviet Embassy in Washington remained adamant over the weekend that it would not allow US officials to interview a Russian teenager who apparently wants to defect.

The diplomatic rumpus in-tensified rapidly as FBI and Secret Service agents positioned side the Soviet Embassy. Agents were also stationed outside a Russian residential compound in north-west Washington, a collection of yellow brick buildings surrounded by a fence and controlled by an electronic

As cars passed in and out agents looked into back seats and were particularly interested in unmarked vans with heavily tinted windows that frequently passed to and fro.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) ordered all airlines not to allow the boy on board. "We have taken every step that we can to prevent him surreptitiously leaving the country", it said. Diplomatic tension was heightened when FBI agents approched the teenage son of a Soviet journalist at Dulles Airport Washington, believing that he might be Andrei Berezhkov, aged 16 son of the first secretary at the Soviet

Anxiety grows in the allies' lake

In the first of a two-part series on Nato's responsibilities in the Mediterranean, RODNEY COWTON, Defence Correspondent, examines the balance of naval power.

It is part of today's conven-tional wisdom that if there should ever be another European war it would be unlikely to begin with a frontal assault through Germany. It would be more likely to arise out of a localized conflict outside the European heartlands which. once out of control, would draw in the superpowers.

The perpetual turmoil around Lebanou and Israel and the present tensions with Libya would ensure that the Middle East would come high on anyone's list of areas which are sufficiently combustible to carry in them the risk of such an escalation. This is one of several factors which are giving rise to increasing anxiety among those who are responsible for Nato's defences in the Mediterranean area.

Twenty years ago the Mediterrranean was seen very much as a Nato lake, and even today, as our table shows, the West has a heavy preponderance of naval power there, though the capabilities on land are much more fragile. In the 1960s, the Soviet Union adopted a policy of developing its naval power and projecting it world-wide. In the Mediterranean this led to a

The United States still puts on a show of strength from time to time with three or even four aircraft carriers in the Mediter-ranean, but much of the time there is only one carrier. Nate's somhern commanders miss few opportunites to complain about the inadequacy of British efforts in the western Mediterranean, and particularly at Gibraltar. The underlying thought is that so long as Spain's commitment to Nato remains hesitant, Britain should accept responsibility for the defence of the Gibraltar straits, and in the absence of a permanently assigned flotilla, the shore-based defences on Gibraltar need to be beefed up.

Although the British Government's public position is that it is satisfied with the forces assigned to Gibraltar, other British sources readily acknowledge that Britain is failing to achieve its Nato force targets in that area. Much of the concern derives from the fact that the Mediter-ranean remains one of the Because the Mediterranean is a relatively small, almost land-locked sea, it contains a large number of narrow passages which would be susceptible to blockading, and most of which would have to be kept open in times of war. These choke-points range from the Suez Canal in the east to Gibraltar in the west with midway, narrow waters around Corsica, Sardinia, Sicily and be kept open, there are others which the West would be-desperate to close. These are the Bosporus, the Dardanelles and the passages around Crete which are the successive gateways from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean. If ever the Soviet Union were to control these routes and he able easily to deploy its Black Sea fleet in the Mediterranean the whole balance of naval power could be radically affected.

It is here that the interface lies between naval and land power, and it is here that Nato's anxieties are greatest.

The world chess fracas

Kasparov the superstar likely to keep his nerve

From Richard Owen Moscow

The latest fracas between Moscow and the International Chess Federation (Fide) could lead to the collapse of the current world championship and even threaten the structure of world chess, according to Soviet chess experts.

If they are right, no one will be more disappointed than Gary Kasparov, the brilliant young grandmaster from Baku, who has been preparing to contest the world title since be started playing chess at the age

Kasparov was due to meet Viktor Korchnoi at Pasadena, California, last weekend in the world championship semi-final. Had he played and won, he would have gone on to chal-leage the winner of the other semi-final between Vasily Smyslov of the Soviet Union and Zoltan Ribli of Hungary for the right to meet Anatoly Karpov, the world champion. In the event, Russia abruptly withdrew from both matches, and Fide declared Korchnoi the winner at Pasadena by default.

Kasparov clearly regrets having to abandon the competition only two steps away from the chance to win the world title at the age of 20. Karpov was 23 when he became world champion. But Kasparov has publicly supported the Soviet decision to withdraw, with the proviso that he hopes the match against Korchnoi can be

From the seclusion of his home in Baku, Azerbaijan, in the south of the Soviet Union, Kasparov said that the match should have taken place in Rotterdam, and that Fide had not heeded the wishes of the participants. Since that is the Soviet line it is difficult for Kasparov to say anything else, but he - and the Soviet Chess Federation - have their eye on the next Fide congress in October, which they say they hope will reverse the decision. Kasparov has been a chess prodigy since he tested his skills on the chessboard five times a day as a child.

quickly understood that chess was very easy and just what I needed", he recalled in an

Lean but well built, with dark good looks, Kasparov is a superstar in a country where chess is a national preoccupation. He is well aware of his brilliance, but has a natural, unassuming and rather ironic

He lives quietly at home with his mother - to whom he is devoted - and prefers to play football or read books in English rather than engage in politics. If he became world champion Kasparov would probably not toe the party line and act as a spokesman for Soviet peace policies as willingly as Karpov does. Chess experts doubt, how-ever, that Kasparov might have been tempted to follow the example of Korchnoi, who defected from Russia in 1976. Some sources think it likely that the Soviet authorities simply want to ensure that Kasparov waits a year or two before being given the chance

Kasparov himself certainly believes the current crisis most be resolved. If it is not, the Soviet Union could declare the current championship invalid and withdraw altogether. Equally, Karpov could remain champion while refusing to meet contenders acknowledged as legitimate by Fide.

If after October the Soviet Union were to form its own "world federation" controlled by the Soviet block and the Third World - as some think it might - Kasparov could lose the chance of becoming a true world champion and would have to settle for winning a Soviet-dominated event. On the other hand, Kasparov recently said that he enjoyed a "psychological advantage" over most opponents because he was the kind of player who could trust himself to take crucial decisions without hesitation. That kind of strong nerve and resilient character should see Kasparov through a personal and professional crisis which would tax many an older and more experienced player.

Da Doo Ron Ron (Channel 4), an analysis of Phil. Spector's records, brought backwith the four meaningless words of its title all that Sixues noise, which now seems as remote as Benny Goodman.

Spector was a record pro-ducer who decided, quite early on in his career, that he was the only person who mattered in the studio. The artists were interchangeable, and he exhausted the musicians in rehearsal so that they lost their individuality: only his extraordinary wall of sound" was important. He had a divining genius for what would sell, together with an extraordinary talent for selfpromotion: such people are unstoppable.

No one seemed to like him cry much: "If there is such a thing as a bad guy," one song-writer said, "it is Phil Spector". But his only fault, apart from the fact that he was better than anyone else, seemed to be his skill in manipulating "PR". In a business which is established upon the "hype" of worthless products, that did not seem a peculiarly damning charge.

It was good to know, from the credits, that The Charterhouse of Parma (Channel 4) is based upon "Stendhal's novel. It is difficult to know what else it might be drawn from, except perhaps some brochures by the Italian tourist industry: the opening scenes looked as if they had been filmed in the Uffizi The only expense spared in this. "Billy" and "icky" are particularly boorish, although presumably the idea is that some "warm" comedy can be derived form the fact that they insult or steal from anyone in sight. The facts that young people are "deprived" and come from Liverpool do not necessarily make them interesting however, on occasions such as this.

He is talking about the Mallens, heroes of one of the most popular trilogies of the most celebrated historical novelist of our time. Catherine Cookson. Tom Cookson never names her, be speaks of his wife as "she", quite naturally, and with pride, as if there were no one else of such importance.

Seven years ago, when Catherine was 70, the Cooksons moved back to the countryside of her childhood after an exile. for her, of over 45 years. They settled for a while in Corbridge but autograph-hunters soon earmarked the spot as a natural break in any journey-between Scotland and the south, and Americans took to planning their summer holidays with a pilgrimage in mind. The Cooksons' new house is 12 miles away, into remote country, on no known route to anywhere, a 300-yearold stone cottage they have added to, on the edge of a reservoir with the moors beyond. Catherine Cookson is standing by the door, an upright, handsome woman in a sage green and lame suit, a little like the headmistress of a select girls' school. She leads the way. Small in appearance from the outside, the house opens on to a series of vast rooms, two great drawing-rooms, a long dimingroom with a mahogany table for 16 and upstairs, reached by a wrought-iron staircase, an immense study with magnificent views over rhododendrons and azaleas to the lake. Everywhere, there are rich patterned materials, flock papers and damask, flowered linen, chandeliers and ornaments, porcelain in cabinets, the walls thickly hung with seascapes and sunsets. Off her bedroom is a Hollywood bathroom with a round, raised bath. There is a large white poodle. Everything is very tidy.

Catherine Cookson's sixtieth novel, Hamilton, is published today. It is quite unlike the great melodramatic family sagas for which she is best known and she has had to swing reluctant agents and publishers behind her. "I always wanted to write comedy", she explains. There seems little likelihood however that it will fail to join all her other books on the bestseller list. Catherine Cookson is said to be in the unique position of being the only writer of her kind to have her entire work in print. Not long ago Corgi presented her with a glass and gold centrepiece for her table with the words of a dying heroine on the base: it was to celebrate her 2712 million sales in paperback alone.

"People have been writing to me for 20 years. They treat me as family. I get a letter whenever someone has a new baby." Answering her post takes up part of each morning. But by then she will have been at work since seven, sitting on the edge of her bed, talking into a dictaphone. "I took to it like a duck to water." She talks fast, laughing often, with an agrecable still-northern voice, occasionally using the Northumberland idiom of her childhood and her heroines: "Me da" (my father). "I've always been a jabberer. I just talked. I see everything in images. The plot sort of unfolds. Even the dialogue. In the morning, it's all there

Writing, for Catherine Cookson, began with a 16,000-word story turned down by the Shields Daily Gazette. It took no firm shape until well after the war. By then she had long since left behind her the extreme poverty of Tyne

Dock, her illegitimacy, her mother's alcoholism and her 12 years in the laundries of various workhouses. But, if the early years of her life were quite exceptionally hard, the middle ones were the most unhappy.
"I now look back on the years between 40 and 50 as a painful nightmare", she wrote in her autobiography, Our Kate. Four miscarriages had been followed by a nervous breakdown, which lasted some 10 years, and the final recognition that the nose-bleeds she had suffered since adolescence in fact came from a rare hereditary blood disease. Today bleed-ing, from tongue and thumbs as well as internally, takes her on repeated emergency night trips to hospital. She dismisses the subject, saying only that the real nuisance is that she is allergic to drugs.

She took 12 years to write Our Kate, which turned out in the end to be more about her mother than herself. "I had to rewrite it eight times, each time deleting a bit more of the bitterness", she says. In fact Our Kate is a touching and rather gentle book. By the time it appeared, in 1968, Catherine Cookson was securely established as the popular and prolific writer of extremely readable historical tales. "I have always looked upon writing as a trade", she says. "I simply apprenticed myself to it." She never makes notes, other than for ages, names and colour of eyes of her characters. "I am lucky: I can keep it all in my head. I can just carry on the story wherever I am."

Her words suggest complacency. But Catherine Cookson is a dogged researcher and her novels are dense in historical detail. She once went down a mine when the heroine of her current novel lived in mining country, "You see, until I was 16 my world was a short straight line Jarrow, East Jarrow, Tyne Dock and East Shield, running along the river. I had everything to catch up. It wasn't until I grew up and read Lord Chesterfield that I began my education. He became my tutor and the public library my university. When Tom's school was evacuated to St Albans during the war we had a little flat opposite the library, I took a book every day: Chaucer, Emerson, John Donne. Good plain writing, no hyperbole. I would have liked to have studied philosophy, Homespun philosophy, that's what you get in my books."

It took her a while, she says, to stop hankering after "grand houses, and ladies and gentlemen" and turn to writing about the things she knows about extreme poverty, the pawn shop, illegitimacy, drunkenness."I had to get rid of that pseudo person. I had to return to my early beginnings." She never travels. But she is possessed, she says, of second sight, especially when it comes to the North. "I'm afraid to believe in reincarnation. Oh no, I've had enough." She talks of the catastrophes of her life baldly, but not with self-pity. There are ten unpublished novels "they didn't pass Tom's eye" - and five more ready in her study. "I never have difficulty thinking up ideas. I have too many. They tumble over each other.'

Macbeth

Riverside

The Compagnia del Collettivo from Parma arrives at the London International Festival of Theatre (LIFT '83) with a great deal of hype for a two-week "Shakespeare season": first Hamlet, now this Macheth. then Henry IV from next Thursday. They use as much or as little of the text (in Italian) as they need to get to the heart of the play and present it in whatever mixture of modern styles seems apt. The Macbeths, for instance, get through their absurd little story on a film set, bowed and scraped to by technician-supers incessantly sniffing their armpits or doing up their flies.

How interesting is it as a theatrical spectacle? Sometimes pretty good. How much does it have to say about Shakespeare's Macheth (which is not the point anyhow)? Not a lot. How much does it say about anything else in the world around us, "the universal truths inherent in great literature"? Not enough. If only subconsciously, so much of the motivation seems to have been simply to cock a snook at an irritatingly towering literary landmark, when in this country that would not be necessary before - and would only get in the way of - the business of ripping apart and fruitfully reconstructing an old play containing something of value.

The evening opens with a faintly bored reading of the play's synopsis in which the Witches salute Macbeth thrice merely from inability to get it right first time. A beaked figure doubling sole Witch and Porter grects Banquo, initial loser in the prophecy stakes, with a loud raspberry but offers Macbeth a cigarette. The dagger speech is mocked with actorish delivery and loads of light.

Along with all this goes an interesting portrayal of the Macbeths themselves as young parvenus lounging in front of a trendy little portable telly with a pile of paperbacks. Duncan's death is discussed rather as an executive and his wife might debate his prospects for promotion or a rise. Television drones on throughout the murder but the discovery of the corpse is breathtakingly staged. with subdued hubbub of horror glimpsed in flashes of white light. Mahler's "most perfect work" and "his supreme masterpiece" liwo recent comments by Mahler scholars on Das Lied von der Erde) is peculiarly satisfying to hear at a Prom. The unusual notion of an almost infinite vision expressed in terms of intimate, personal song-settings matches perfectly Albert Hall/Radio 3 the combination of huge space and intense concentration in the Albert Hall: at Saturday night's performance (shown yesterday evening on BBCI) the large audience was rapt and still. On this occasion it was the vividly detailed orchestral writing that fired the imagination: the eerie, twisted pairs of wind instruments warbling sounds of nature; a superlative first oboe (John Anderson) unravelling the uncertain skein of melody in the second section of "Der Abschied": a weightless solo flute (David Butt) floating above the voice. John Pritchard shaped the music with warm, rounded gestures, missing something of Mahler's sheer desolation but allowing his

What is one to say of a work by Peter Maxwell Davies that shatters no idols, does not rant and rail against the world, and has no deadly issues of power, corruption or survival to un-fold? His Sinfonia Concernance for five solo wind, timpani and strings, which received its first performance at Friday night's Prom (after the intended pre-miere in America during the recent Britain Salutes New ork Festival was cancelled), is a cool, collected essay, complex and resiless on the surface as and then oboe eloquently any work of Davies's has to be, singing the phrase that began but underneath breathing an extraordinary, untypical repose of spirit which suggests that the composer has perhaps found a (temporary?) musical equilib-

quite stand out clearly enough; but the musical argument, as in Davies's Second Symphony, is scrupulously organized, and the clarity is increased here by the absence of any flamboyant orchestral effects. The end of this first movement evaporates exquisitely into what turns out to be the material of the second, where the minor thirds drift airily, like a half-heard echo of Davies's Orkney music: from an F minor-ish third emerges a long, low C on flute and oboe, an alternative point of response to the F - which then, however, the timpani raps home, drawing the wind soloists in the final bars to an unexpectedly sharp.

unanimity of chording. Solo flute tries to recapture the mood of lassitude, pondering the F minor-F major thirds. but the timpani brilliantly begins a dancing finale which brings in all the wind soloists horn burbling, flute scuttering the work. Suddenly everything collapses on to the low, quiet C again, but the coda, with its long racing string scales and ringing, pealing woodwind cadenzas, sweeps all doubt away - but caves behind an uncarthly, fading echo. In a mainly confident first performance, strongly directed Neville Marriner, Antony (clarinet) stood out among the excellent soloists for his ability to find the meaning as well as the notes; Tristan Fry's timpani playing was equally vivid. Rostropovich Festival Buoyant showman

The first Rostropovich Festival has happened at Snape; and with it, at its heart on Saturday night, the apotheosis of the inevitble Slava-and-friends concept in a programme of "Paintings and Music". There they all were: Prokofiev. Akhmatova, Shostakovich, Tsvetayeva. Stravinsky - for the eye in the canvases of a fellow expatriot. Gabriel Glikman, staring in the raw, sculpted distillation of character, and for the ear in the musical tributes of Rostropovich and his wife, all curves, fullness and substan-

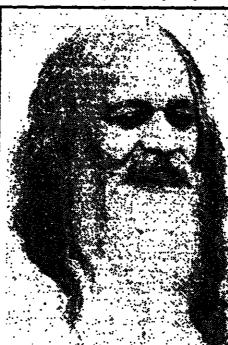

The pictures, well hung in the unvielding proportions of the Maltings recital room, were spirited via slide and screen into the concert hall, where to the accompaniment of Rostropovich's buoyant verbal show manship they spoke their owr silent subtext. In Glikman' own work (think of Chagall Kandinsky, the cubist Picasso) there is a volatile movement between dartings of colour and laconic wit and blocks of numb stasis drained of colour - and so it was in the recital.

There was Stravinsky, bony triangular, sitting like a blue Gandhi ("when he smiled he was like an evil old lady"), with the droll scepticisms of his 1937 "Russian Song" played with nicely mocking restraint by Rostropovich and Roger Vig-noles. There were, on the other hand, the blue hope-drained Nicholas Kenyon eyes of Shostakovich: all angles of dry white lines biting on coarse canvas or hardboard This life was angular, chased from one corner to another"); and there was his "Tears for a Dead Child", its question and enswer Jewish folksong shared between Jane Mackenzie's dramatic and ever more vibrant soprano and Marcia Swanston's distinctive smoky mezzo. Marina Tsvetayeva remembered by Galina Vishnevskaya in a spare, word-par ing performance of Shostakovich's "Hamlet's Dialogue with his Conscience", while portraits of Alexander Blok and Anna Akhmatova, both pierced by the red bayonet of revolution, had their counterparts in Shostako-vich and Prokofiev settings.

Prokofiev alone remained with the eyes of a child: past the laconic wit, the biting repartee Glickman and Rostropovich saw the still blue eyes and full red lips of fairytale, and the C major wonder of the Adagio from Cinderella.

GOVERNMENTS INVITED

TO SOLVE THEIR PROBLEMS

THE WORLD GOVERNMENT OF THE AGE OF ENLIGHTENMENT ANNOUNCES its readiness to solve the problems of any government regardless of the magnitude and nature of the problem-political, economic, social, or religious; and irrespective of its system - capitalism, communism, socialism, democracy, or dictatorship.

Governments are invited to contract with the World Government of the Age of Enlightenment to solve their problems on the basis of cost reimbursement after the target is reached.

1983 can be the year of fulfilment for every govern-

Consultations, discussions, deputations, and feasibility studies may not be necessary because every government already knows what must be achieved, and the World Government has already developed techniques to fulfil any requirement. The government will set the target, specify the stages, and determine the criteria of success at each stage.

The World Government of the Age of Enlightenment will design the project accordingly and implement it.

The first step will be a letter of intention from the govern-

The dedicated modeller of fashion

I had always been fascinated by shops. I enjoyed pottering with objects and arranging them into patterns. In Jerusalem as a child I loved going into the local corner-shop. Food was scarce, but the couple who owned the shop took pride in displaying their cheeses on marble slabs with net covers like umbrellas and little blue beads around the base. Rows of sausages hung from a pole and on the floor there were sacks pole and on the floor there were sacks full of grain, beautifully laid out. And now, in 1964. I suggested the idea of opening a shop to Fitz. He thought it was silly, as life would revolve around looking after it, but I was feeling more and more infatuated with the idea of having a place to show off the clothes having a place to show off the clothes we had been selling through our mail-

We had accumulated lots of rejects and garments that people had sent back to exchange. Without telling Fitz, I hauled them over from our basement warehouse in Motcomb Street to our flat and spent hours arranging them round the living room, hanging them on door frames, fireplaces and cupboards. The next day I telephoned friends and secretaries of fashion writers, announcing a sale.

I put the record player on as loud as I could, playing a Beatles LP. By one o'clock the flat was seething. Every person I had telephoned had told at least 10 others, who in turn had brought friends along. When I telephoned Fitz at his office to come and have look, I had £500 in a shoe box I was using as a till. Our jedgoom had was using as a till. Our bedroom had been turned into a changing room. I even had trouble refusing to sell my cushions and casserole dishes. By the time Fitz arrived, the flat looked as if a bomb had hit it. He thought it was a fluke, but for days afterwards people would arrive wanting to know if the sale was still on.

During one of my junk-hunting sprees I spotted a marvellous dilapidated place on the corner of Abingdon Road in Kensington. It had been a chemist's shop and had been closed for quite a while, but there were loss of black and gold signs left and the windows were painted halfway up with scratched black paint with gold-leaf edges. The woodwork outside was covered in peeling blue-grey paint. I tell in love with it instantly.

I dragged Fitz down there and he loved it too. We found the landlord, who said he wouldn't take less than £20 a week for the premises. We took it on the spot.

The shop was miles away from anywhere, even from Kensington High Street, which in those days was a place where only old ladies snopped. We were both still working at our jobs. Fitz as an advertising account executive and me as a freelance fashion artist. but we redecorated the place at weekends. Fitz painted the walls navv blue. We bought a beautiful Dutch wardrobe for £40, took the doors off and made them into a cash desk. We made long curtains in a William Morris print. A friend lent us two bronze lamps with huge black shades. I refused to have the peeling exterior

We asked our manufacturer to make us dresses of one style, a smock with very narrow sleeves, in a range of fabrics. He agreed, as a favour, (Many years later, he revealed that he had felt sorry for us.)
While our stock was being manufactured, we received 2,000 orders by post for a brown chalk-striped smock which had been featured in Woman's Mirror. Two hundred of them arrived, and Fitz decided to store them at the shop as the Motcomb Street basement was already bulging. We delivered the dresses to the snop late one Friday

The next morning. Fitz dropped me off at the shop and left to collect some more dresses from the manufacturer. It was 10 o'clock and the curtains were still drawn across the windows. I left the front door and went into the lavatory. When I came out the shop was packed with girls. In concentrated silence they were all trying on the brown chalk-striped smock. I turned the record player on. I only had the one Beatles LP. The louder the music played, the faster the girls moved and the more people appeared in the shop. A silent queue formed in front of the cash desk. Each girl had a two-guinea dress on her arm. Not one asked if there were any other styles or other sizes. Nobody knew the price; they just held their purses open. By 11 o'clock, I had sold every dress.

As soon as ! could get to the phone, I called Fitz and said: "Quick, grab any dress you can." The shop was still full of people waiting for a delivery. When he arrived, the car's hood was down and brown chalk-striped dresses were heuped up in a mountain behind him. Everyone left the shop and we sold in the street, from the car. We were still selling that brown chalk-striped dress in one size and one colour six months later. Fitz and I now had no other life than Biba. When the shop opened we had both given up our jobs. Every morning we would feel great anxiety. We were come back again. One Tuesday morning the weather shop was empty. By noon the shop was the pan, the bonanza was over. We dashed up the road to Kensington High Street. It was empty, too. Not 2 soul, not one old lady with a shopping basket on two little wheels.

We soon realized that the shopping public reacts identically to the weather and the political situation. When they are depressed, they all depressed at the same time. When the sun comes out they are all happy and go out shopping. When the sun is hot they go to the park to sunbathe and you've lost them. When it rains, if you're a little shop they don't come, if you are a big store they stay with you all day. But it was this neurosis that we found so exciting. For Fitz it was like fishing, and for me it was like hunting through junk shops: you never knew when you would catch

Our Saturdays were always spectacular, whatever the weather. If it was raining, the shop stank of wet wool and the floor would be awash. If it was sunny the groups of newly-found friends would congregate outside the shop. It became a meeting place. Years later I had letters from people who met at Biba, spent their courtship in Biba on Saturdays, married, had babies and wrapped them in Biba purple nappies. Recently I heard a beautiful girl at the airport calling, "Biba, Biba, to a little girl of about six in a straw hat and smock. We had become a big part of many people's lives.

At 26 Fitz and 1 felt much older than the others, like Mum and Dad. We worried about the girls who worked in the shop, and their fast lives. Some could cope, but many fell by the wayside by the time they were 19. I don't think our girls were promiscuous; they picked and chose. If they fancied someone they went right out and got what they were after instead of weaving webs and hypocritimother waiting for them to see if they came home with a crumpled dress. In was awful. The sky was grey, there was the buoyant mid-1960s they all had a feel of a thunderstorm coming. The jobs and they were not used to eating massive meals. They were the postwar still empty. I was feeling really babies who had been deprived of depressed - it had all been a flash in nourishing protein in childhood and grew up into beautiful skinny people. A designer's dream. It didn't take much for them to look outstanding. The simpler the better, the shorter the better. Their legs seemed to be neverending. Suddenly London was filled with long-legged girls and boys who became envied all over the world.

The girls and boys started to travel on new all-in cheap holidays, and to pick up continental elegance, too. There were masses of them and they all seemed to flock to Abingdon Road. With Cathy McGowan endorsing our clothes by wearing them nearly every week to present Ready Steady Go on TV, there was a sort of underground grapevine which was growing daily. As soon as there was a new style the tomtoms would beat out a message throughout the clubs and offices and the shop would be full again. Every girl could buy a new dress for her evening date. They might all turn up wearing the same uncomfortable Biba smock that itched and stopped them bending their arms, but it was uniform for an

were so tiny there was no need for the heavy upholstery. The natural form was beginning to show.

I had not through the depressing bits of my life before by slipping into fantasy and dream. When I met Fitz he made my fantasies come true. Biba was like a fantasy. I didn't like the way I looked, but the classic Biba dolly had all the attributes I lacked. She was very pretty and young. She had an upturned nose, rosy cheeks, and a skinny body with long asparagus legs and tiny feet. She was square-shouldered and quite flat-chested. Her head was perched on a long, swanlike neck. Her face was a perfect oval, her lids were heavy with long spiky lashes. She looked sweet but was as hard as nails. She did what she liked on impulse and had no Mum to influence her judgment.

As time went by my Biba girl became more dreamy and untouchable. Her long straight hair turned into a halo of golden ringlets, her cheeks were hollowed by brown powder, and her lips stained with sepia lipstick. The thin line of her brows framed her sparkly blue eyes. Once she had formed into a person it was easy to think up dresses and all the other things that she might want to use. She was so young and fresh that all those Auntic colours that I had hated when I was young looked new on her. In the daylight the orchids, dusty blues, bilberries and mulberries looked quite in tune with her surroundings. Once she was inside Biba, the music thundered, the lighting was soft, and she became more mysterious.

All classes mingled under the shop's creaking roof. There was no social distinction. Their common denominator was youth and rebellion against the establishment. Young working pirls, the beat offspring of aristocratic families, stars and would-be stars all flocked to the shop. One night as we were closing a tiny blonde girl came in and began taking the clothes off the hatstands. Instead of trying them on behind the dangerously wobbly screens, she stripped off in the shop and proceeded to try on smocks and trouser suits. Fitz was told to stay in cal traps, as we had to in the 1950s. In or bras. Their bosoms and tummies the back office as the tiny, uninhibited larger than life. It was Julie Christie, getting her wardrobe together for the film Darling.

It was almost a year before the name was painted over the door at Abingdon Road. I didn't like it. It was like branding something. The shop looked much better without a name. If people wanted to find us, they would.

(By the end of 1965, the business had outgrown the Abingdon Road shop. As Swinging London gathered momentum. Biba was moved to larger premises on Kensington Church Street.)

As opening day approached I was getting more and more nervous. Maybe nobody would follow us the extra 500 yards up the road. We orchestrated a moving party from Abingdon Road to Church Street and arranged a photocall for the press. Our arranged a photocall for the press. Our girls wheeled rails full of dresses all the way up Abingdon Road and down Kensington High Street to the new shop, followed by photographers. A pantechnicon arrived in Church Street

The more the man in the street whistled, the shorter the skirts became full of hatstands and girls. The girls were holding Biba bags, in case the name of the shop didn't get mentioned arrived and so did a million other guests and gatecrashers. Cathy and Cilla clambered on to the lorry and helped to unload the hatstands, and the photographers had a field day. Music was thumping in the shop and the wine rapidly disappeared. Everybody had a good time.

I had been stationed in the new shop all alone waiting anxiously for guests to arrive, when it all happened at once.

When the last guest left it was 6 o'clock in the evening. The floor was awash with spilled wine. We began to bring out the stock and fill the shelves with T-shirts for the official opening the following day. It was a long night. By morning my brain was still whirring but my body had gone to sleep, so we went and had a greasy breakfast at the neighbouring cafe. When we came back there was a queue outside the

My favourite moments were always just before a new shop was to open: the music would be turned on, the girls ready as if to go on stage, tension mounting and - bang - the doors would open and let in the first This time the shop was full of people within moments. They examined everything - we had branched out into many new areas with everything dyed to match in a large spectrum of muted colours. There were big-brimmed hats, doublebreasted wool coats, tights, gloves, bags, jumpers and shirts, dresses and underwear. Even the matching feather boas, which I had intended only to use as decoration, sold like hot cakes. Our first Saturday in Church Street was astonishing. The shop was four times the size of Abingdon Road but as crowded as the little one had been. The pavement outside was milling with people, every window seat was occupied and I even saw our bank manager take a quick look inside. By the early afternoon the hatstands were bare but still more people came to look.

Two weeks after Church Street opened, in March 1966, a team of reporters from Time magazine arrived. The next day it was Stern and then Paris Match. In their usual unimpressed way, our girls and the customers continued to crowd the shop. America and Europe had discovered, or invented, Swinging London. Long before this the man in the street had taken exposed thighs as part of life, but all of a sudden there were wolf whistles and cries of "Ooh, look at that one". The more they exclaimed, the shorter the skirts became. Every week I thought that we surely couldn't shorten them any more, but magically there were a few odd inches to go.

It was through absolute ignorance that the mini reached the streets. The short skirt was on the way but it was only seen in showrooms. Courreges had made a strong impact on the world with his space-age dresses. Mary Quant was the first British designer to show the mini but I still say that our manufacturer, dear old Theo Savva, was the man responsible for putting the mini on the high street. When the jersey allocated for a little suit arrived at his factory it was steaming hot from the finishers. As Fitz bombarded Theo with telephone calls for more and more stock for the opening of the shop, Theo cut the somewhat stretchy double iersey without "resting" it. Jersey that is not rested soon relaxes itself back to its proper width. It was not the uncut fabric that rested - it was the skirts! When I saw the delivery I nearly had a heart attack. The skirts were only 10 inches long. God, I thought, we'll go bust - we'll never be able to sell them. I couldn't sleep, but that little fluted skirt walked out on customers as fast as we could get it on to the stands. © Powedpiace Ltd. 1983

Passion dons a uniform

Last month we created a new publishing house, Mills & Bang, to market a completely new form of novel: romantic military fiction, aimed to satisfy the fantasies of both men and women.

The response was remarkable - all titles were sold out within days of hitting the bookstalls, and Fomping into Passion appeared briefly on the Cross-Channel best-seller list.

Now, Moreover Enterprises Ltd is proud to announce a further selection of Milks and Bang novels - the novels that are as tough as old boots yet as soft as a first kiss!

MODERN TIMES

sideways look at the British way of life

Not very long ago, when privilege and wealth were the prerogative of the upper classes, there were some people called Emsworth who had titles and butlers called Beach. They also owned a lot of the land over which they hunted, shot and fished. When they travelled they stayed in other Emsworths' houses or the best hotels. They were a jolly crowd and often asked all their friends and relations to come and play at weekends.

Sadly the Emsworths were living on borrowed time. Even in the shires the social and economic structure was changing. Most of the poor got richer while the Emsworths found it increasingly difficult to make ends meet - so much so that they sometimes had to sell off a wing of a house, or a few hundred acres, or even charge people called Smith, who wanted to see how the Emsworths lived, a couple of shillings to come and look over the house,

At the same time as all this was going on a lot of people were making a lot of money, more often than not out of selling for thousands of pounds the mews cottages in which the Emsworths' retainers had lived rent-free for years. Or from installing central heating systems or keeping books or shops. These people (called Goldfingers) believed in property and looked round for ways of making even more money. And all the while the Smiths (of whom there were infinitely more than there were Emsworths or Goldfingers) beavered away in their small corners and sometimes cast a wistful eye at the Emsworths and Goldfingers, who seemed to have all the fun and owned all the emblems of wealth - horses and boats and lakes and miles of river bank - and wished they could join in.

Then one day, by chance, Lord Emsworth and Mr Goldfinger and Mr Smith happened to meet and between them cooked up a brilliant wheeze. (It was Goldfinger's idea but Emsworth and Smith quickly saw the logic of it.) To Lord Emsworth, Goldfinger said: "You've got the land but no money; I've got the money and a good head for business - and you" (to Smith) "who haven't much of either could, if all your friends chipped in, afford to buy a part of all the things you've dreamed of owning but could never afford."

And so the syndicate was born - a compromise. like most things in life, but one which gave all the members a slice of property and a slice of a dream. Thereafter syndicates and partnerships and consortia sprang up all over the place. Wherever there was a piece of property or a coveted object far too expensive for any one individual to buy, the syndicate bought. They purchased minor stately homes and turned them into country clubs or health farms, they bought yachts and racehorses, and sold shares to people who wanted to sail or swan around the Members' Enclosure; they even bought old masters and when they were not gathering dust in a vault, took it in turn to hang them in their various drawing rooms.

Lord Emsworth was happy because he was able to stay on in his estate and pay Fred the gamekeeper, and though he would have preferred not to have all the Smiths and Goldfingers wandering over his land and fishing his rivers, he was a realist and knew that this way at least there might be a bit left for his son. Smith was deliriously happy because his wife could afford a tan and told all her friends that she owned a racehorse (though in fact she had only one-twelfth Goldfinger was probably the happiest of all because, apart from the shares he owned in all the syndicates, he had made enough money to buy a few horses and lakes and houses outright.

Puffing his pipe of an evening, Lord Emsworth mused over a book of proverbs. He found an old Spanish one which said something to the effect that "he who divides gets the worst share", which confirmed what he had known all along, that foreigners didn't know what they were talking

The cost of buying a smali yacht is prohibitive to many people, but spread among 15 or 20 it becomes possible. We even have members who could afford to buy outright but don't want to make a large outlay on a boat they may use for only which for the remaining eriod, will be idle in the Mediterranean, deteriorating. And maintenance costs, alone, would be massive. People want ownership for a variety of casons: many have found that yachting is a pleasant family activity but that sort of boat whose cost would come within their budget is not exactly comfortable - a trailer sailer or a speedboat for example. And then there's the glamour. As people's expectations develop they look at what their finances will allow against the style of life that is attainable. There's a fantastic crosssection of time sharers - a lot from the better pro-fessions (though no solicitors yet). People would feel inadequate on a yacht if their experience was so scant that they didn't have the confidence to anchor in the swish bays between the millionaires and summon up, like Charles Forte, a cassata from the ice-cream boat. In my father's day anything beyond that was referred to as a hotel shoot. A syndicate is a bit like Dad's Army - a lot depends on the people in it. It's never the same as a private shoot of course, but it's a matter of finance. The cost of running a year if you had to pay for everything. Split between six of you it's feasible. Now there are a lot more up-market people - chairmen, company directors. People buy in because owning a racehorse is glamorous. If you own a horse you can rub shoulders with the rich and famous: we had a horse running at Cheltenham in the same race as the Queen Mother's horse, both trained by Fulke Walwyn. lar national pas-times, nosing into the private lives of the famous and worrying about the state of our health. have been cleverly combined in a new television series to be screened by HTV in the autumn. Called Consider Yourself, it films various celebrities doing what comes nat-urally and then hauls them in front of a doctor and psychologist to be given a serious talking-to.

Katic Boyle was so obviously a picture of gorgeous, glowing good health that she escaped censure. Roddy Llewellyn, though in good shape, was made so nervous by the proceedings that he reached out for more cigarettes than his normal ration. Darts player Eric Bristow turned out to be the villain of the piece: overweight, under-exercised, much given to late nights, late meals and lavish boozing.

However, he was so obviously fit and happy that he got away with a peevish warning to change his wicked ways by the time he's 30. The moral of that seems to be that a reckless youth is healthier than a misspent middle age.

What surprised Terry Miller, the programme's producer, was the way the normally self confident celebrities floundered helplessly when caught out in their bad habits. I understand how they felt when exposed to close questioning of the medical kind since, being pale and peaky looking. I am always having to submit to this kind of inquisition. Why don't I wear a vest? Why do I spend Sunday afternoons on a sofa vith a pile of novels and a mug of coffee instead of getting some roses in my cheeks?

Undeterred by my churlish ripostes, my husband even tenderly inquires every morning how I slept although by now he must have noticed that every night I fall into a snoring, ten hour stupor.

It's getting impossible for most of us to claim 101 per cent fitness in the light of so many diagnose-ityourself books flooding the market, all of them crammed with diagrams of parts of the body you never worried about before because you didn't know you were carrying them around with you. Ever since the reading public has worked itself through Our Bodies, Ourselves, it's fatal to ask "How do you do?" since you will probably be told...

Someone's state of health is considered a suitable topic for conversation in a way the state of their bank balance or the state of their sex life is not. I feel sorry for David Steel, innocently turning up for a refreshing weekend at David Owen's country house and getting instead the doctor's bedside manner and advice on the lines of "why don't you take a good long rest . . don't think of coming back to politics for a while ... come back and see me again in 1997".

Just the sort of thing to make him wonder whether he was likely to last

I shall be interested to see if the subjects of Consider Yourself do just what the television doctor ordered. Will Anne Nightingale give up smoking? Will Leslie Thomas lose some weight? Such riveting questions should not be left hanging in the airwaves and I certainly hope HTV is planning a second series. provisionally entitled Reconsider Yourself.

 There is a lot of serious wardrobe confusion about. Jeanne Turnock was sacked from her job at a crematorium for wearing trousers; MP Edwina Currie's pink tracksuit got some pretty old-fashioned looks from the honourable members and barrister Anne Mallalieu's correct but dreary black working outfit was denied the "uniform" status that would have given her some tax

We could simplify matters by adopting, to the last working woman among us, the American dress-forsuccess business look, worn by female secretaries and company presidents alike and consisting of a sober suit with a tailored jacket worn over a crisp blouse in an unexciting colour. The streets of any American city are full of women identically if uninspiringly dressed and they never wake up in the morning yelling. What on earth am I going to wear today?"

Diary divide

There will be a fringe beyond the fringe at this year's Labour Party conference in Brighton. Party headquarters had refused to list in the conference diary meetings organized by groups which are not on the official register. That includes, of course, Militant, but also Socialists for Labour Victory. Briefing, Labour Campaign on Ireland, and the Labour Abortion Rights Campaign. Tribune received an invitation to list details of its meeting; Ken Livingstone's paper, Labour Herald, did not (though it may yet be admitted). Mandy Moore of Socialists for Labour Victory says her organization will aim to get an "alternative diary" with a comprehenisve list of the week's events into the hands of every delegate. "It is the diary which most delegates follow when deciding how to spend their evenings", she says. "so being excluded is quite

Nationalism, the threat to Nato

In proportion to their influence, too much attention is devoted to the minority who criticize Nato strategy from the left and too little to the attitudes of the general public and to those who criticize it from the centre or right - the "neo-Gaullists". This latter group, which includes a number of European politicians. some close to power, is more influential and therefore a far more insidious long-term threat to the Atlantic alliance than the small and obviously demoralized membership of CND, whose policies have been massively rejected at the polls. Mr John Nott, the former Defence Secretary, declared himself a Gaullist and supported the Trident programme as a hedge against Nato's collapse. Hedley Bull, Professor of International Relations at Oxford, has said that the US has subordinated European detente in the interests of its world struggle with the Soviet Union. He has called for the formation of a European alliance within Nato and the development of a European nuclear

Sir James Cable, former head of the Foreign Officer Planning Staff, has called Britain's dependence on the US an addictive drug and suggested that it may have contributed to our national decline. He has also called for Britain to follow the French lead in defence policy, to close the US bases here and to limit Britain's commitment to the alliance mainly to maritime forces. None of those quoted would like to see the precipitate collapse of Nato (and neither of course did de Gaulle) but, by suggesting that the alliance may disappear or that we should weaken our commitment to it, they advocate policies which could set in train an irreversible movement towards such a collapse. This is particularly so because their criticism coincides with growing attacks on the alliance from many Americans who resent the discrepancy between the US and European defence budgets.

John Nott, echoing the line set by de Gaulle. Right, Senator Stevens, a trend to a new isolationism

When Nato was established in 1949 the US was the greatest economic power in history and it seemed reasonable to ask it to protect the impoverished Europeans. By agreeing to this request Washington overturned all the foreign policy traditions which the US had built up since independence. But today the Europeans are not impoverished; wages in Copenhagen or Hamburg are now generally as good as those in Detroit or Dallas. et in 1981 the Americans spent $782 per head on defence while the Danes spent $280.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the traditional US hostility towards involvement in Europe has shown signs of revival, and that the Republican whip in the Senate, Senator Ted Stevens, and others have sought to reduce the US forces stationed in Europe.

Is the time then ripe for a mutually agreed divorce? In July 1969 The Times declared, "at present 250 million people of Western Europe rely on 200 million Americans to defend them from 200 million Russians although the Russians have 700 million angry Chinese at their backs. This proposition has only to be stated for it to be seen to be unreasonable". Since then that proposition has been put with increasing frequency and force. On the other hand, if 350,000 American servicemen sta-premise of a million more to come in a crisis, have failed to reassure the West Europeans or to convince European military strategists that a Russian attack could be defeated without the use of nuclear weapons, how could Europe defend itself?

Without US support for the Europeans the Warsaw Pact would have a comfortable three to one advantage over the West in the main elements of conventional military power, tanks and aircraft. Soviet submarines would dominate the oceans and the Soviet nuclear preponderance would be absolute. There is no prospect that the West European governments would undertake the huge defence spending needed to rectify so great an imbalance. Nor is it desirable that they should make economic and social sacrifices on such a scale.

If Nato were to collapse, the most probable immediate outcome is that Western Europe would dissolve into confused medley of states, some trying to defend themselves, some hoping that their very weakness would save them from the effects of conflict elsewhere, others seeking an accommodation with Moscow.

It would be optimistic to assume that the Europeans would cooperate to defend themselves. But were they to do so their defences would still be much less effective than at present, and if they tried to make them effective they would be vastly more tioned in Western Europe, and the expensive. Alliances have incomparably the most successful arms control measures evolved since

The only advantage which the Europeans might acquire from the break-up of Nato would be a slight reduction in the risks of becoming involved in a war which began somewhere else in the world. But this cannot be taken for granted: in most cases Europe's strategic interests in the Third World corocide with those of the US, while, if the US and Soviet Union were to go to war, it is inconceivable that a strategically vital area such as Europe would be left unscathed.

. If Nato did collapse we should most certainly try to fashion an adequate West European defence. But we should be aware of the magnitude of the problems involved. West Europeans can still do much, if they so choose, to strengthen the cohesion and military effectiveness of the alliance by increasing their share of the defence burden to a more equitable level and thereby working out a mutually acceptable relationship with the US.

But if the alliance did disintegrate through a combination of insurmountable tensions and flawed perceptions of interest, no alternative strategy - whether in the form of neutralism or of military cooperation among the Europeans - could ensure the long-term security of Europe as effectively as the alliance has done in the past. It is above all in the period of uncertainty and confusion which would follow the collapse of Nato that each state would be most vuinerable to Soviet threats and blandishments and the dangers of war would be most them to be looked after, but they have a largely unfounded dread of anyone putting them to any other use. Even attempts to turn old burial grounds into gardens, the one use readily sanctioned by the law, can become contentious.

Both Highgate and Nunhead offer a fine example of a further paradox in a topic riddled with paradoxes. Both were established, in 1839 and 1840 respectively, by the London Cemetery Company; with 37 and 52 acres apiece, they were part of the hygienic (and profitable) movement of the times to remove death from the "choked charnel houses" of the City churchyards and install it more commodiously in spacious suburban grounds. Yet a hundred-odd years later, history has come around in a circle: Highgate, Nunhead, Tower Hamlets and the like have, in turn, become choked with the dead and with their dilapidated funerary furniture, and once again words such as "decay", "disease" and "desecration" are invoked in a plea that someone should do something about the situation. A wild garden is all very well, but a vandalized jungle defeats every purpose. Most of the once-profitable companies are extinct or in liquidation, their one capital asset transformed into a after their local cemeteries or pay for remarkable but appalling white be financially responsible.

The very cult of death which originally paid such dividends has exacerbated the problem of the dead. For centuries, most people were buried simply in woollen shrouds, and wooden crosses were the norm: returning to dust meant just that because, within a hundred years, both visible and invisible relics obligingly rotted away. The universal use of the coffin and the general introduction of stone memorials in the eighteenth century changed all that – and indeed subverted the whole purpose of consigning a body to the earth.

The private family grave, pur-chased "in perpetuity" and marked by a substantial edifice, is a logical absurdity, a vain assertion of the social and economic values of this life and their power to transcend even mortality.

Thus the final paradox is that these old cemeteries have no value as an evocation of loved individuals they evoke, rather, the knockabout drama of turnip-bogeys and ghouls -but they are valuable as a social record and as a repository of sculpture. Higheate's horse, lion and recumbent dog are well known - and may be viewed again, in photographs, at the exhibition, at the elephant for which no one wants to Museum of London - but almost all the hig London cemeteries and many of the provincial ones have a line in weeping angels; be-willowed urns and eccentric canopies. Ouis custodiet? The sums of money once paid by the grave owners to have them looked after have been rendered derisory by time, inflation and the inroads of nature: and in any case, these works of art, in their now-wild setting, are not private property but a public legacy. William Morris's dictum, originally applied to buildings, seems apposite to cemeteries also: These ... do not belong to us only

They belonged to our forefathers and will belong to our descendants unless we play them false... We are only trustees for those who will come after us."

Yes, but who are to be the trustees? Local authorities, understandably, are either unwilling or inefficent in assuming the burden of the upkeep of what is not just a local institution: bodies of local people may be dedicated but lack both real power and funds. This month an appeal for Highgate is being launched - but the real need is a campaign for a national body comparable with the National Trust to assume overall control for what is, after all, a national asset.

Why the sugar isle is in such a stir

Port Louis, Mauritius As the campaign for the Mauritian general election on Sunday enters the final lap, most of the smart political money in this Indian Ocean sugar island is on the Mouvement Militant Mauricien (MMM) of the 38-year-old Paul Bérenger, a mem-ber of the white Franco-Mauritian minority, to win by a short head. But the wisest punters are hedging their bets. For, as the wily former agriculture minister, Sir Satcam Boolell, puts it, "today's enemy can be tomorrow's friend". It is only 14 months since Mauritius, 720 square miles of coralfringed volcanic rock inhabited by a racially mixed population of more than 990,000, last went to the polls and swept the left-wing MMM into power in alliance with the smaller Parti Socialiste Mauricien (PSM). The alliance won all 62 directly elected seats.

The octogenarian Sir Seewoosagur Ramgoolam, the Hindu doctor who had led Mauritius for 14 years since independence from Britain, and had dominated the local political scene for a decade before that, failed to gain a scat

The victorious alliance had not been in power for more than a few weeks, however, before its leaders were squabbling among themselves. It survived a political crisis last October and limped on until March 22 when Mr Bérenger, the Finance Minister, resigned with 10 cabinet will take off in a big way PHS colleagues. claiming he was not getting full support for the unpopular measures needed to straighten Monetary Fund in return for out the country's parlous finances.

The Prime Minister, Anerood Jugnauth, a 53-year-old Hindu who rained as a lawyer in Britain and had been president of the MMM since 1973, parted company with Mr Bérenger, the MMM's founder, and formed a new party, the Mouvement Socialiste Militant (MSM), but he did not have a clear majority and was forced to call an election. The MSM consists of Mr Jugnauth and some other Indian defectors from the MMM, plus virtually the whole of the PSM, whose youthful leader, Harish Boodhoo, represents a populist Hindu conservatism that has developed distinctly communalist and anti-white overtones. Mr Jugnauth and Mr Boodhoo accuse Mr Berenger of being power-hungry and of betraying the "socialist" cause for which they fought together last year.

This however, has not stopped the MSM from forming an alliance with the discredited Labour Party of Sir Seewoosagur.

Mr Bérenger has his own credipility gap. He was largely responsible for the strong emphasis in last year's MMM-PSM manifesto on redistributing wealth, raising living standards and improving welfare services. But it was he, as Finance Minister, who had to announce to the public the postponement of most of these programmes because of the economic stringencies required by the World Bank and the International reduced the controversial export duty on sugar. The sugar industry, which furnishes more than threequarters of Mauritian foreign exchange earnings, is in real financial difficulty, but it is also controlled by the grands blancs, the white Franco-Mauritian minority. Mr Bérenger thus laid himself open to the thinly veiled racial taunt of being a lackey of (white) big business.

Certainly, it is paradoxical that Mr Berenger, the radical firebrand who learnt his politics on the student barricades in Paris in 1968. built his political career in Mauritius on trade union organization, and was even imprisoned for a year in the early 1970s, is now privately the preferred candidate of many conservative Mauritian businessmen. Mauritius's foreign creditors also see him as the man best equipped to get the economy back on the rails.

The history of Mauritius is as surprising as its politics. Uninhabited for most of recorded history, it was colonized sporadically by the Dutch in the seventeenth century and settled permanently in 1721 by the French, who imprinted their culture and language on the island established the sugar industry and introduced African slaves. Their mixed blood descendants now form the Creole population and their pidgin French dialect is the nearest thing to a lingua franca.
In 1810 the French were defeated by the British, who abolished slavery and instead imported indentured labour from India. Today 69 per cent of the population are Indians (52 per cent Hindus and 17 per cent Muslims), 25 per cent Creoles and 6 per cent Franco-Mauritians and Chinese.

This racial and cultural witch's brew has developed into one of the liveliest multi-party democracies in the world. The high quality (mainly French) press is unfettered, the judiciary is independent and there are no political prisoners. It is entirely in keeping with Mauritius's record that it may now become the first country under black majority rule to elect a white prime minister. Whichever group comes to power will have to operate for some years within the narrow limits set by the island is heavily in debt, one in every four Mauritians of working age is unemployed, most of the jobless being in the 15-24 age group, and the sugar industry has been operating at a loss for several years. In practice, there are restraints on foreign policy, too, despite the radical rhetoric of the MMM on non-alignment. Nor is anyone seriously contemplating any action that might disrupt the lucrative South African tourist trade.

All the main contending parties are pledged to turn Mauritius into a republic within the Commonwealth under a non-executive president.

general election the Labour Party is still in a condition of shock. This is healthy. It would have been unhealthy if party members had shrugged off the events of June 9 as just another setback, easily capable of being put right after a gentle period of reassessment. Very few have made that ostrich-like mistake. Indeed, there has been an almost masochistic tendency to pile on the

Many Members of Parliament who narrowly squeaked home (often in constituencies previously regarded as safe), rather than congratulating themselves and each other on their survival have instead in many cases been assessing their chances of re-election next time with some pessimism. In analysis after analysis, prominent Labour figures have harshly demonstrated not only the near-chimination of the party's support in vast tracts of the country. but also the disturbing drift away from Labour in areas whose staunch loyalty was for generations taken for

Even the ludicrously protracted leadership election has brought its benefits. The four candidates, unable to keep silent during the four-mouth campaign, have issued manifestos, written articles, deivered speeches, taken part in debates. As well as making ritual speeches about aspects of policy, they have felt obliged again and again to return to discussing the state of the party. That some of their conclusions seem to me to be mistaken is not the point. In thinking hard about the party's little more than nine months will principles, its tole, its disagreeable recent past and its discouraging potential for the future, they have enabled - perhaps forced - the membership to participate in that thinking process too.

The leadership election process itself has been inevitably subjected to reappraisal, little of it favourable. The party of the people – as it still thinks of itself – has been compelled unhappily to accept that for the first time in 80 years anyone seeking its highest offices has to have money. Affiliated organizations demand copies, sometimes in the thousands, of statements by candidates; the cost of production and of postage is phenomenal. Candidates have to iour the country, addressing Labour Party and trade union meetings; the travelling expenses are considerable. When Harold Wilson was elected leader 20 years ago, his election expenses totalled is 4d (the cost of telephone calls asking over-ardent supporters not to canvass for him). Now the Labour press is full of appeals by campaign managers for Manchester, Gorton come to believe that this is not the way to conduct Labour Party elections.

Again, the internal democracy of the trade unions has become a subject of debate, in a manner not agreeable to many leading the unions but extremely salutary for the prospects of genuine democracy within those unions. Decisions to favour one candidate or apolier, if made by an executive council or a delegate conference, have been unconvincingly defended. Even consultation of members, embarked upon with whatever good intentions, has often been cumbersome, incompetent or faulty. It is clear that, even if the electoral college servives in its present form, it will be difficult to repeat these elephantine procedures in future contests. If this election convinces unions that they will have to put their own house in order, such a conversion will undermine many of the glib arguments that Norman Tebbit has used in seeking to vindicate his recently published anti-trade union proposals.

Labour activists know that the party cannot be allowed to drift simply because events, instead of allowing such a drift, will provide an almost non-stop series of tests by which Labour's efforts at recovery will be gauged. By elections will come along and Penrith, providing Labour with yet another lost deposit apparently remorseless trend is reversed, each by election could be a further milestone along the road of the party's decline. In come the local elections, and shortly after them the elections to the European Assembly, in which Labour could have difficulty in defending even its present poor

Labour on June 9 was sustained. insofar as it was sustained at all, by the residual loyalty of 28 per cent of the electorate. Many of those voters were giving a final chance to the party of their parents and grand-parents. Each of those previous supporters, as well as the allegiance of new voters, will have to be won anew every time the politing booths open. Labour cannot afford to take 2 single elector for granted any longer. The next hundle will come at the party conference, now less than seven weeks away. Even if that hurdle is surmounted, there will still be more ahead capable of sending the party sprawling. If Labour fails at the first hurdle, many spectators may have lost interest by the time the next is reached.

Palmy days for the council counsel

It is sometimes said that the group of people that benefited most from the French Revolution were lawyers. Those who kept their heads, that is. And it seems that the same thing is happening in London in these revolutionary times.

I am astonished that the Bar Council has not mounted a cam-paign to save the GLC. I had expected, by now, petitions and probing questions in Parliament. Or at the very least a letter to The Times signed by 20 eminent heads of chambers.

But perhaps it is happening after all - in an appropriately discreet manner, words in the ear of ministers at the Reform Club. That

The truth is that the Bar has done premendously well out of the GLC in the last two years - as it has out of all the new left-wing councils. Since the tranmatic shock of the Law Lords' decision on London Transport fares in late 1981, the evolving attitude of the left towards the law has been fascinating to watch. Tempted at first to rail at the whole legal system as merely an arm of capitalist oppression, and the judges as pawns of a Tory government, then to include in futile confrontationist tactics (the "Can't Pay, Won't Pay" campaign), they quickly came to realize that the law was an exciting game at which two could play. And it is fair to say that the Conservative forces that challenged the legitimacy of the fare reductions in the first place (Bromley Council et al) have only themselves to blame for this development.

in any case the GLC Labour leaders found lawyers who told them that the Law Lords' judgment did not after all mean what it said, and they could decrease fares. They found lawyers who told them they did not have to carry out the Ministry of Defence's civil defence exercises. When they had one legal opinion suggesting they would be at risk of personal surcharge if they did not put up the price of school meals, they had little difficulty in finding another to say they could perfectly legitimately keep it where it was. They have even (and here's an irony for the party of trade unionism) got legal advice on how to act unilaterally in imposing de-cisions on their own staff associ-

The law on local authority powers and discretion is based on the anachronistic assumption that there is a consensus among all thinking men and women about what is reasonable". Councillors are obliged by law to act in a way that is not unreasonable. The leading legal definition of this term is Lord Green's judgment in the celebrated "Wednesbury Corporation" case of 1947. This dictum, though it is always quoted with veneration, is Michael Hornsby not much help, being entirely opaque and tautologous. It reads, inter alia: "Unreasonable" is a be done" What happy days of noblesse oblige when everybody in power could agree on what was done and not done. And indeed it lasted a surprisingly long time. During the nine years I have been in local government, the first seven were spent in the innocent belief that I was elected to take decisions on the basis of my own judgment, and I never thought of taking legal advice. What thin years these must have been for the local government bar.

All that is changed. With consensus gone, with challenges to the status quo mounting in volume and bitterness from all sides, we do not feel safe even to open our mouths, let alone raise our hands to vote. without a counsel's opinion - and usually two or three.

But of course, since the law depends on a definition of the most subjective of terms (not only "reasonable" but "proper" and relevant"), it is not too difficult to find lawyers to suit political taste. Barristers are people too, after all, and the range of their political beliefs stretches from the crusted old reactionaries on the right whose view of civic responsibilities goes back to the poor law and the workhouse, to those trendy left transvestites of the Temple (wig and gown and m'learned friend by day, denims and CND badge an comrade by night) whose vision is of the new collectivist dawn. (For some of the latter the growth in local government work has brought not only liberality but liberation: they have been enabled to "come out". and are now sometimes seen around County Hall wearing their evening rig in ďaylight.) One of the ironies of the present situation is that it seems to be proving a favourite maxim of the Prime Minister: that private enterprise always performs better than the state. The freelance barristers we employ always seem to outwit the parliamentary draftsmen. Indeed, maybe the Bar will do even better out of the Government's forthgovernment than it has done out of the present cold war. Just as the tax lawyers always find ways of keeping their clients' money out of the clutches of the Inland Revenue, so these new magicians of the local government Bar will find loopholes through which to preserve local government's powers.

As an old friend of mine who is both a barrister and a former distinguished leader of a local authority always used to say when contemplating some new and par-ticularly asinine piece of legislation: Well, it all makes work for the working man to do !" And so it will no doubt. With thousands on the

THE TURKISH QUESTION

Can Turkey still stay as a R'estern ally when she returns to democracy again? Can she believe her allies when they agreed with "Evrenism" in her most critical days? Can Turkey rely on these countries again?

Those questions are asked in a document which, as reported in The Times last week, emanates from the sixteen Turkish political leaders of right and left who have been interned since June 2 in the disused radar station at Zincirbozan, near Canakkale on the Dardanelles. The authors of the document may not have intended it for publication, or at least may not have wished to be publicly associated with it. But there is no doubt that it does accurately reflect their views, and that they wished these views to be known in opinion-forming and policy-making circles in Europe and the United States.

The questions are in any case ones which such circles should be asking themselves with increasing discomfort. Up to now the prevailing tendency in the West has been to give General Evren and his regime the benefit. of the doubt. They did, after all. put an end to the terrorism that was claiming twenty lives a day when they took over in September 1980, and to the parliamentary stalemate which had paralysed Turkey's political system. They allowed Mr Turgut Ozal, the monetarist guru of the incumbent government, to carry on his work of stabilising Turkey's finances and restoring her foreign credit.

Periodic military interventions to put the country back on course are hardly unprecedented in Turkey. There was one in 1969, another in 1971, both of which were followed by a fairly swift resumption of the democratic process. The generals of 1980 promised to do the same again, only to make a more thorough job of it this time.

That, to the political establishment both in Turkey itself and in the West, is what they appeared at first sight to be doing. True, in the process they arrested very large numbers of people, and there was a growing body of evidence that many of those people were tortured during interrogation. But the scale of terrorism to be dealt with seemed to justify a large number of arrests, and - unhappily - torture had been by no means unknown in Turkey even under civilian government.

True, the limitations on freedom of expression seemed rather draconian, but they were widely assumed to be only a temporary aspect of martial law. True, the constitution promulgated last year seemed rather heavily weighted in favour of the executive power and against the freedom of the individual, but that was perhaps a necessary prophylactic against the excesses of the 1970s. True, the referendum held to ratify it was hardly a free and fair choice, but rather than quibble about that it was surely better to accept the result and get back to civilian rule?

Sustained by such arguments, politicians and media alike, in the West, have more or less consciously applied a lower standard to the regime's performance on human and civil rights than they would to any other European country, west or east. The long drawn out trial of twenty-seven intellectuals, including a retired ambassador (brought to court shaven-headed, refused permission to go abroad for cancer treatment, and now facing a probable ten-year prison sentence) for the heinous crime of forming a "peace association", has generally received downpage treatment. The American government seems unperturbed by the fact that the correspondent of United Press International was beaten up when he applied for a passport and has still not been given one five months later, in spite of written assurance to the contrary from the Turkish ambassador in Washington. Because martial law had been introduced there to save democracy, not to stamp it out. Or so we thought, and so - it is fair to say - many mainstream Turkish politicians thought until this year. But such a view is becoming less tenable.

The purge of universities this spring, directed not merely against Marxists but against even the most mildly left-leaning liberals, was hardly the act of a regime intending to restore democracy in any meaningful sense. Even so, the authorisation of political parties in April, in preparation for the elections due in November, seemed to offer a chance for free debate to resume.

The real moment of truth came on May 31, when the regime banned the first of the new parties that seemed likely to win substantial popular support and ordered the detention of Mr Süleyman Demirel, the oftreelected conservative prime minister of the past two decades, along with thirteen other former politicians and two of the new party's would-be founders. Since then it has vetoed personalities to prevent other potentially popular parties, of both left and right, from reaching the quota of thirty founding members which it has itself fixed. The deadline for formation of parties is now fast approaching and it is clear that only those whose leaders have been hand-picked by the generals will be allowed to qualify. Even they will have to submit their lists of candidates to a further veto.

Democracy means allowing the people to make their own choices - which, it now appears is precisely what Turkey's generals are unwilling to do. In these circumstances it will be difficult for the rest of the world to accept the government that emerges from the elections (if they are though what is planned is not, after all, the restoration of democracy but the legitimation of continued military rule.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Implications of green belt guidance

Chipping Barnet (Conservative) Sir. Your leader on green belt policy (August 8) puts the recent Government draft circular in its proper and wider context. As you rightly judge, the circular has caused consternation to at least one MP representing part of an outer London borough containing a substantial wedge of

The draft circular is vague if not contradictory. If the final circular issued is not materially altered it will, I fear, cause totally different interpretations to be put upon it by the public, local planning authorities and potential developers.

green beit

For example, paragraph 11 of the draft circular states: . . . the Government continue to attach great importance to the use of green belts to contain the sprawl of built-up areas and to safeguard the neighbouring countryside from en-croachment . . . " This is a fair croachment . . ." This is a fair summary of the definition and purpose of green belis.

Yet two paragraphs later the assertion is made that "... If green belts are drawn excessively tightly around existing built-up areas it may not be possible to maintain the degree of permanence that (they) should have ...

Surely, if the policy is to be effective, their boundaries should be drawn tightly around built-up areas on the fringes of the metropolitan

(and other) green belts?

As I interpret the draft circular, the danger is that it will encourage owners and agents to apply for planning permission on any suitable site fit for development and make it more difficult for authorities to resist. It is relevant to add here that interested third parties cannot appeal against any planning permission granted. It may be that there are certain sites in designated or interim green belts which are detached from the principal open space rings, surrounded by built-up areas and unused and unsightly. Such sites might be better developed for housing, but they must be relatively few and far between.

I suggest local councils should identify such sites and invite public comment on them before releasing them, if appropriate, for develop-ment. Otherwise, the final circular

From Mr Sydney Chapman, MP for should be confined to stressing the success of green belts over the past four decades and the continuing need for authorities to be vigilant in protecting them from encroaching suburbia.

This is particularly necessary at a time when thousands of acres of land in the metropolis and other conurbations lie unused, under-used derelict; and especially when London's first orbital motorway will be completed in three years with the consequent pressure for development all around it intensified. Yours faithfully.

SYDNEY CHAPMAN. House of Commons.

From Mr R. W. G. Smith Sir, One peg of the latest demand by the housebuilders for the release of green belt land for housing is that land of "little amenity value", for example run-down sites, should be freed for building.

Parts of London's green belt are undoubtedly of much less scenic value than others, but that does not mean that they should be released for housing. The green belt is there to prevent expansion of towns and the swallowing up of countryside by building, and the scenic quality of the land is irrelevant.

It suits the development interests to pretend that the less attractive land might as well be built upon, but that misrepresentation of the nature of the green belt ought not to go unchallenged. The tragedy is that the Secretary of State for the Environment and some newspapers look like falling for the trick.

People living near run-down green belt sites attach great importance to them if it is all that they have to prevent the spread of the Great Wen. To sacrifice green belt to mollify (temporarily) the vociferous and greedy building industry would be extremely short-sighted and a tragedy for future generations.

Unsightly sites can be rendered attractive and useful without surrendering them to builders. Surely it is not beyond our ingenuity to do that, and to meet any genuine housing needs elsewhere. Yours faithfully,

R. W. G. SMITH, Chairman, The London Green Belt Council, 111 Billy Lows Lane, Potters Bar. Hertfordshire.

Curtain up

From Mr Arnold M. Crook and Mr Anthony Peck

Sir. We at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, take great exception to Sir Roy Strong's article of July 30. His reference to "that most elegant but now sadly run-down theatre' completely misrepresents how the theatre looks and the public sees it. Is he aware of the political and economic gulf which exists between the subsidised and unsubsidised sectors of theatre?

In April, 1980, the licence fee imposed on the Haymarket by the GLC rose from £75 to £1,350 (this applied to all theatres). Since that date the licence fee has increased annually to £1.866. The fee, being based on seating capacity, means that some theatres of larger capacity instead of paying £75 as hitherto, are now paying £4,368; however, subsicompanies as registered charities pay only a nominal fee of £30. Additionally, whereas the rates paid by this theatre and others are in the five-figure category, those in the subsidised area are considerably less, as also are their rents. The Haymarket is a class 1 listed building and, in company with all other occupiers of listed buildings, has as a result its cross to bear with its additional burdensome expenses.

Although we are unable to predict what may happen in the future (it may well be the title, "Curtains for our theatre heritage", is applicable). we look to it with more realism and enthusiasm than does Sir Roy. Rather than complain one should be more positive in helping theatre. We in the theatre pursue with tireless vigour all avenues in an effort to improve its lot. Alas, in the corridors of power little attention is, at this moment, being paid to our pleas by those who could alleviate our position. People running theatres are dedicated and skilled professionals doing a difficult job very well indeed and it is support they require, not criticism. Finally, in reviewing A Patriot For

Me with Mr Alan Bates, which opened here on August 8 to an extremely high level of advance bookings, Mr Jack Tinker referred to the Haymarket as "this palace of establishment theatre".

This group has four of the most beautiful theatres in England, the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, the Strand, the Theatre Royal, Brighton and Richmond Theatre and categorically none of them are "sadly run down" ARNOLD M. CROOK, Chairman,

Sir, The editorial, "Physician, heal thyself" (August 10) is a good example of scientism - that is to say the dressing up of a subject in the terms of science but containing very little of the actual content of science. In this particular sample the scientistic approach has taken the form of the rejection of scientific method with a simultaneous appeal to science in the form of "the world of pure science"

The confused thought is instanced by the phrase "... and prefer to believe that all physical states can be examined and explained objec-tively". Labour leadership

Sir, Alan Sapper ("More like a nightmare ticket" - feature, August 11) presumes too much. How does he know that the Labour Party annual conference will vote year in year out the same way on each and every policy issue - for that is the only basis that he can write as he does about a Labour leadership team "in line" and "in tune" with annual conference.

He glosses over in his last sentence the key point that the new leader will not be able to "carry out" any policies until he becomes Prime Minister, This is not an unimportant point.

He cites "a recent opinion poll" (unnamed) which gave a majority for increased taxation to be spent on improving social services as evidence that our policies were not understood. However, the 1979 British Election Study showed how fragile the support is on this point.

Seventy-one per cent were in favour of the statement that government services such health, education and welfare should be kept up even if it means that taxes cannot be reduced"; whereas 71 per cent also agreed that "social services and benefits should be cut back". The divisive contest of 1981 and its aftermath made it impossible to begin the task of selling a policy which would be believed on this one issue he cites.

There is not a shred of evidence that either Roy Hattersley or Neil Kinnock wish to be surrounded by yes men"; indeed the opposite is the case. Authority the stumbling block

The second secon

As if borrowing the idea from Britzin, the World Council of Churches has just announced that it will itself have church Mr Robert Bolt, 59; Sir Charles Carter, 64; Mr Jim Dale, 48; Mr unity consultations with the Roman Catholic Church in Edmund Dell, 62: Air Marshel Sir Humphrey Edwardes-Jones, 78; Mr Harold C. While councils of churches, national or international, represent the specifically Protestant, Anglican or Orthodox reflex response to Lord Kilbrandon. 77; Major-Gen-eral R. W. Madoc, 76; Sir Patrick church disunity, they have proved to be peculiarly difficult institutions for the Roman Nairne, 62; Mr Oscar Peterson, 58; Mr Justice Popplewell, 56; Professor Sir Leon Radzinowicz, 77; Air Marshal J. de M. Severne, 58; Mr Catholic system to relate to. Wynford Vaughan-Thomas, 75; Major-General D. N. Wimberley, 87.

At the same time the inexorable historical pressure for some sort of relationship inevitably puts the issue back on the agenda every time it has been knocked off. And in the last decade it has ceased to be respectable to discuss church unity as if the Roman Catholic Church did not exist.

It does exist, and is very big. Any reasonable basis of affiliation between the World Council of Churches and the Roman Catholic Church would swamp the world council with Roman Catholics. fundamentally of the relative sizes of the various British churches, the same objection would not apply 10 Roman Catholic membership of the British Council of Churches, which can therefore be argued as a reasonable solution in British circumstances.

The fundamental difficulty, however, concerns authority. In the Protestant and Anglican worlds, loose national and international federations function successfully perhaps because not much is expected of them. The further removed they are from the local congregation the less they matter to that local congregation.

No one ever stopped an argument in a Parochial Church Council simply by quoting a document from the World Council of Churches, the British Council of Churches, or the Lambeth Conference. Even sophisticated and critical Roman Catholics, on the other hand, treat official Roman Catholic documents with respect. They may not be infallible, but they are not to be trifled with, it is assumed. Authority is not just the stumbling block to closer relations at the structural level,

It will be the Roman Catholic side which raises it, but the issue is not any longer seen on the other side, as it once was, as merely a Roman neurosis. The authotity question has found its way into the internal agendas of the other churches, for it is closely related to the question of the deviopment of doctrine and the preservation of tradition. In the Church of England both the ordination of women and unity with the Free Churches reached stalement because of unresolved differences about the authority of the church. Without better agreement on this doctrine, the Church of England has found itself incapable of deciding what evolutions of its faith and order are legitimate, and how they are to be sanctioned.

On the non-Roman Catholic side, the tendency has been to assume that authority does indeed exist, and belong to something loosely called "the Church". So long as authority's only function was to underline

On the Roman side, the opposite tendency has been to locate authority very precisely in the Holy See, the divine instrument of an authority given to the Church, in this case the Roman Catholic Church, at its foundation.

Both views are changing quite rapidly, though neither position has been completely abandoned. The only conver-gence possible, which does in-fact seem to be gradually emerging, would come from adding the two approaches together, and letting them shape each other until they are compatible.

The result would not be some solution to the vexed question of Roman Catholic relations with councils of churches, but church unity itself in a Church with an authority the world is

During the next five months Colonel Newcy had to administer the force in camps along the line of the railway. Tents were few, food was short, sanitation and hygiene extremely difficult. He tried to prevent the collapse of morale among his sick and exhausted men and to obtain reasonable conduct and supphies from the Japanese.

On completion of the railway those survivors who had not died of malnutrition or disease returned to Singapore where Newey became prisoners' representative in Changi.

At the end of the war he was invalided home and after convalescence began voluntary work which continued for almost 20 years. He was chairman of Orpington Urban District Council, a county councillor and alderman of Kent, chairman of the Kent. Mr Anthony Thompson, QC and Mr Charles Gray for Mr Bassatne, Mr Charles Haddon-Cave for the LORD JUSTICE DUNN said out of a judgment which had been obtained by the plaintiffs against the defendants for $700,000 and a further sum in respect of a repudiation of a time charter.

The master's orders which were the foundation of the proceedings were made on March 17, 1983, and required that Mr Bassatne "an officer of the ... debtor company, attend and be orally examined-... before one of the officers of the High Court of Justice, at such time ation was April 7 and each order was endorsed with the penal notice that if he neglected to obey the order, he would be liable to process of execution for the purpose of compelling him to obey the order. After an unsuccessful attempt to serve the orders personally on Mr Bassame, they were served by post by leave of Mr Justice Lloyd.

By agreement of the parties' solicitors, the date of examination was changed to April 20. The oral examination took place on that date but, as Mr Bassatne did not produce relevant documents, by consent the bearing was further adjourned until August 4. Although the adjourned dates were stamped on the back of the original orders, the orders as amended were never served on Mr Bassaine. Throughout the proceedings Mr assauce was represented by the dates of the adjourned hearings and were in communication with him. Indeed by a telex of June 4, the solicitors indicated to the plaintiffs' solicitors that Mr Bassatne would attend the hearing of August 4. On August 2, the master refused

Mr Bassaine's solicitors' application to vacate the hearing date. August 4.
On August 4, counsel and solicitors were worried about the effect of underwater currents, storms and other factors on the stability of their equipment. They turned to Lake Baikal. Its maximum depth of 1,620m is adequate, although only about a third of the United States' site. The lake drops to a depth of 1 km within a few handred metres of the shore, so cable laying presents no problem and the thick ice which covers it for many months makes it simpler to

In my judgment those words include 'as such times as [the officer] might appoint. They are not limited to initial appointment. They cover adjournments of that appoint-

The order first appointed April 7 and subsequently August 4, which became under Order 45, rule 6(2), the time specified in the order. It was suggested by Mr Haddon-Cave, for the plaintiffs, that where the person sought to be examined was represented by solicitors who as in the present case, were well aware of the various orders made, committed was resident as a contraction. Whatever the knowledge of the solicitors or the person proceeded against, committal proceedings would be bad unless the rules had been obeyed. That was illustrated by In re Tuck ([1906] I Ch 692). Before the order for examination could be enforced by way of committed proceedings, it must be served personally on Mr Bassane. The judge fell into error in thinking that service of the original order was speed, expire of the service or the service of the service of the service of the service or the service or the service of the service or the service or the service or the service of the service or the service of the service or the service of the service or th directors of UBM, the builders' merchant, ratified a share option scheme at a board meeting five days before a much-rumoured bid for the group emerged, has raised a number of evebrows.

UBM board has option on honour

Thes directors are now sitting on a paper profit of

The share option scheme was drawn up in May, presented to shareholders in June, then approved at the annual meeting on July

In line with the normal procedures, the allocations options on 961,000 shares were decided at the next board meeting after the annual meeting on July 29 and the option price was set in line with the then market price of 81p. The four directors involved accepted the option offer in the next few days and the scheme was ratified on August 5.

It was five days later that Norcros unveiled its 109pa-share takeover bid and stock market speculation pushed UBM shares sharply higher on hopes of a counter-bid. They now stand at 121.5p.

However, the unfortunate aspect to this affair is that the stock market already appeared to have a good idea a bid was on the way.

Speculation in the market

On August 4, for instance, the day before the UBM board allocated the options, The Times reported: "Talk of a bid of 110p a share sent shares of builders' merchant UBM group racing away 6p to equal the year's high of 93p yesterday." The previous day UBM shares had risen

The Times report suggested Pilkington might be the predator but the question nevertheless arises whether in these circumstances UBM directors should have gone ahead with the share option

This is not to suggest that the UBM directors

The announcement that had foreknowledge of a bid or indeed knew anything that other shareholders did not. Mr Roger Pinnington, UBM chief executive, denies any knowledge of the Norcros bid until the day it appeared and Norcros has confirmed this.

> Of the speculation in the market, Mr Pinnington points out that there have been takeover rumours before. Attempts to discover whether something was afoot this time yielded no evidence of unusual share buying.

Firmly against Norcros bid

In short, there is no reason to suppose that directors had any prior knowledge of a bid.

But the point at issue is a rather different one. It is that share option schemes are meant to be offered as an incentive to management and the purpose of this one was to promote the "future prosperity" of the company by enabling executives involved to identify their interests with those of the shareholders.

Should the Norcros bid succeed, it would be very hard to see how this had been achieved. Given the unfortunate timing of events, it would look more as though directors were receiving compensation of a sort and this was not the reason why shareholders approved the scheme in the first place, nor was that why the scheme was pro-

Without a bid the options are not exercisable for three years and the UBM directors would prefer it stayed that way. They have come out firmly against the Norcros bid and without a bid the controversy would go away.

In the circumstances, however, the UBM directors would be best advised to waive their rights to the options until the bid battle is over. At the least shareholders should be given another chance to vote on ged circumstances.

Sunny prospect for financial markets

a much more cheery prospect

The big break in the series of had money supply figures in New York holds out the prospect of a stabilization and then lower interest rates and a weaker dollar.

Last month, each week's money number was worse than expected. The disappointment was the more serious because of mounting evidence of a desire on the part of the Federal Reserve to reduce the rate of money growth. Leading the expectation of lower money growth were notable economists such as Mr Peter Caneld of Merrill Lynch, Mr Robert Sinche of Bear Stearns and Mr Patrick Savin of Drexel Burnham Lambert. They pointed to the slower growth in banks' reserves in the past three

Since June 8, the "adjusted monetary base" (banks' reserves plus currency) rose only $1.3bn. (about £855m). The level of "adjusted bank reserves" peaked in the week of June 8 at just under $35bn and were still only $54.1bu in the week of August 3. Mr Savin said last week: Since mid-May, both total banks; reserves and non-bor-rowed reserves have decelerated from 13.2 per cent to 6.2 per cent and from 0.4 per cent to minus 0.6 per cent respectively. Borrowings from the discount window (of the Federal Reserve) by the banks bave virtually doubled from $866m to $1,679m. Thus in about eight weeks, the growth rate of non-borrowed reserves. the raw material of future money growth, has slowed substantially. What motivates this tactic?

"In our view, nothing more than an attempt to slow money growth, which has clearly served to destabilize the bond market in the first half of

Despite this evidence of the Fed's desire to slow money growth, the results last mouth were disappointing.
The disappointments we after week added to the fear that money growth was out of control. This intensified the downward trend in bond prices and led to the boom in demand for dollars in the world's foreign exchange markets. Last week, the informed estimates made by those who specialise in this difficult field were that there would be a rise of about $3ba in M1 for the week of August 3.

As late as Thursday, Dow Jones capital markets were

The financial markets will face reporting the result of their sarrey that M.I. would rise by $2.2bu. When the massier was announced on Friday - a rise of $400m, there was som just short of jubiliation

The "Beliwether" 12 per cent US Treasury bonds due in 2013 rose a full 2 points to 182 10/32 on the news and the yield on this bond dropped from 11.97 per cent on Thursday to 11.71 per cent. Ninety-day Treasury Bills dropped in yield from 9.49 per cent on Thursday to 9.34 per cent and the six months bills dropped from 9.64 per cent on Thursday to 9.50 per cent.

Teking into account the rise of only $400m in M1 an-nomiced on Friday, we can see that in the eight weeks from June 15 to August 3, M1 rose from $514.5bn to $517.6bn - an increase of $3.1bn, but in the eight weeks to June 15, M1 rose $18.3bn.

There was also good news on Friday about the broader money aggregate MZ. In the five months to Jane, M2 rose Silbu well below the forecast made by informed forecasters who had expected an increase of at least $15bn last mouth.

Expressing the general views of experts the outlook for interest rates, Mr Sinche last week forecast that by next spring long term bond yields would be down around 10 per cent and that Treasury Bills would be down around 8 1/4 -8½ per cent. Mr Sinche also forecast, that the dollar would fall 10-20 per cent against the Dentschemark and the Swiss franc by next year - a view that has been the stuff of Citibank forecasts for some

Thus, with this evidence of slower money growth, the normally expectable results are beginning to flow - lower interest rates, a weaker dollar and better bond prices.

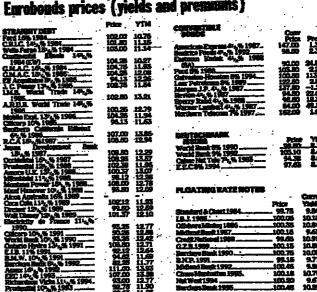

Some fear that this prespec of slower money growth would bring the booming recovery of the United States to an abrupt balt. There will however be a rising velocity of the slower growing money stock and a weaker dollar to offset any such effects. In the normal course of events, the state of growth would necessarily slow down from the 8.7 per cent rise in the second quarter of this year and the expected 8-9 per cent rate of increase in the third quarter. A rate of growth of 5-6 per cent in the fourth quarter real

GNP and 3 per cent in the first quarter of next year is a essonable estimate.

Historical background

The Company was founded by Mr. Alec Schumann, the father of two of the present Directors, and until very recently a majority of the steric capital has always remained in the ownership of the Schumann family. 6.5 per cent. of the Company's issued steric capital is presently owned by Directors other than the Schumanns and approximately 4.7 per cent. by a company associated with Hambros Bank Limited ("Hambros"), which subscribed for shares in 1971 tolowing its participation in 1967 in the financing of an early stage of Bespak's expansion. In 1959, operating under licence, the Group began the assembly and sale in the United Kingdom and certain other territories of The Risdon Manufacturing Company's ("Risdon") range of acrosol valves, consisting of continuous spray valves for use its aerosols containing partitimes and cologines are sold to replace components perfumes and cologine aerosols, their more important application proved to be in the pharmaceutical feet. In the early 1990's Bespak began to replace components, purchased from Riadon with United Kingdom manufactured components for reasons of cost and speed of delivery. Bespak also began improving upon the designs covered by the licence, producing innovations based on those designs and originating specialised valves of its own designs, becoming one of the world's major manufacturers of specialist aerosol valves. The finence and all associated agreements with Risdon were terminated in 1976.

The Company grew substantially during the late 1960's and early 1970's due in particular to the increase

The Company graw substantially during the late 1960's and early 1970's due in particular to the increase in sales of two products incorporating Bespair's valves. The first was the aerosol cologine spray pioneered in the United Kingdom by one of Bespair's customers. Yardley Manufacturing Limited, and the second was a pharmaceutical product for the relief of asthme, the bronchodilator Ventolin (a registered trade mark of the Glaco group ("Glaco")). Verdolin was first mentested in an aerosol form with a valve manufactured by Sespair in 1969 by Aflen & Hanburys Limited, a subsidiary of Glaco Holdings p.t.c. By 1975 select to Glaco of the special metering valve for use with this product were equalific sales of perfume and cologine velves and since then sales of this valve have always expected those of any other Bespair product despite the fact that the Company has remained the market feeder in the United Kingdom for the supply of views for aerospic party perfumes and cologins.

In November, 1982 2,750,000 shares were placed by Hambros and per to take place in the Company's issued shares in the Unisted Securities Market.

The business

Bespek's principal business consists of the manufacture and sale of several different ranges of specialised series which subsets of these, phermaceutical metering valves, which are manufactured both in a standard range and in a special version for Glazo, accounted for approximately 70 per cent; of Bespek's sales in the financial year ended 29th April, 1963, most of which were to Glazo. This range of valves is designed to deliver an accurately measured and repeatable dose in a spray fine enough to reach the lungs, and is principally used in initialistic therapy. Bespek is aware of only two significant competitors in this market.

Another important product line is a range of valves for use with perfumes and colognes. Although sales of these valves accounted for just under 15 per cent. of Bespak's total sales in the financial year ended 25th April, 1983, they represent well over trait the United Kingdom market for such products. Bespak supplies these valves to most of the major cosmetic houses in the United Kingdom including Lentheric, Yardiey, L'Oreal and

In addition to firs two main product lines Bespak manufactures and sells several other types of valves. It supplies the majority of United Kingdom manufacturers of aerosol line extinguishers with a unique range of very high arrission rate valves, together with handles, which for their part are capable of meeting the relevant requirements of the new British Standard for serosol line extinguishers. Although this product line only accounted for around 5 per cent. of sales in the financial year ended 29th April, 1983, the Company is increasing production capacity in anticipation of substantial sales growth in the United Stales.

Bespak also manufactures special valves for specific applications, including valves for butane lighter relias (for customers such as Ronson and Dunnial) and lock de-icars, valves for use with powders, thick creams, mestics and polyurathene foams and a medical catheter valve, all of which together accounted for the remainder of sales in the financial year-ended 29th April, 1963.

The geographical analysis of turnover is as follows:

United Kingdom Europe Rest of the world

Financial year ended 9000 - 5000 137 351 8,696

Although approximately 80 per cent. of sales in the Company's Brancial year ended 29th April, 1983 were to United Kingdom customers, the Directors are aware that a substantial proportion of valves sold in the United Kingdom are incorporated in products which are utilinately exported.

The Group

The Group comprises Bespak, which is the holding company and principal manufacturing company. Bertspa Engineering Co. Limited ("Bertspa"), which operates the plastic injection moulding department, and B.E.S. Technology Limited ("Bestech"), which is responsible for the design and development of much of the specialised machinery used by Bespak and Bertspa.

Sespaix produces over 100 milion finished products per annum, using increasingly automated methods to assemble bought in springs, gaskets and metal pressings with components injection-mouland by Bertspa in angineering plastics. Thirty-live injection-moulating machines, run on a continuous basis, currently produce over 300 milion of these small high practision moulded components in a year under strict quality control. Mould tools are made to extremely line interances, issuely in the Company's own toolsoon. The Company is also at leader in its field in the use of computerised techniques. Administration and production controls are based on an extensively developed BM installation and the Company has invested in a sophisticated Computer Aided Design/Computer Aided Manufacturing (CAD/CAM) system, backed up by Computer Numerically Controlled (CNC) machine tools, principally in order to accelerate detail design of the product, tool design and the tool manufacturing processes, thus enabling the Company to respond more quickly to customers' requirements. The Oirectors believe that one of Bespaic's strangitis is its highly developed largineering expertise which has resulted in the Company, acquiring a reputation for high quality and reliability.

Although the Company relies upon a small number of suppliers for certain bought in components and materials a policy of seeking additional sources for critical components is actively pursued. However, the testing of elternative materials or components for use in pharmaceutical applications is invariably protracted to order to cament its leading relationship with a major supplier the Company has recently acquired an approximate 27 per cent. stampholding in R. C. Bull Rubber Co. Limited.

The Company's marketing approach is based on a five year plan designed to achieve profit growth and reduce dependence on any one customer. Bespais's position as a supplier to specialist market segments means that close personal contact can be maintained with customers by a small professional sales said backed up by a technical support service. Three sales executives are responsible for the United Kingdom and a fourth for visiting overseas customers, particularly is Europe. Many overseas tentiories used to be covered by agency agreements but the Company/has recently taken over direct responsibility for a number of titiese, including the agreements but the Company/has recently concentrating. Selling agencies still exist in parts of Eastern Europe and the Far East and it Canada, South America, Japan and South Africa. The Company has a representative in the United States as part of its plan for major expansion there. It is Bespais policy to maintain close contacts with customers and potential outstomers so that its knowledge of their requirements is as complete and up to date as possible, thus enabling Bespais continuely to develop its product ranges so as to meet these requirements.

The Ventolin valve

Bespek's range of pharmaceutical valves includes a special form of metering valve for use with Ventolin, and in the linencial year ended 20th April, 1983 sales of these valves to Glavo accounted for approximately 60 per carri, of Bespek's asies. While Glavo purchases seried valves from other manufacturers for use with other products. Bespek is Glavo's sole supplier of valves for Ventolin.

Following the expressed of Vertolin by the United States Food and Drug Administration to term of such appeared being the approach in the product of the Bestak valve). Glavo commenced selling Vertolin in the United States in 1931. By agreement with Glavo, Schering Plough Corporation ("Schering") also manufactures united States in 1931. By agreement with Glavo, Schering Plough Corporation ("Schering") also manufactures and sells a similar product there, under the name Proventil. Bespek has agreed with Glavo not to sell the Vertolin and sells a similar product there, under the name Proventil Bespek has agreed with this valve for use with Proventil valve other than to Glavo but with Glavo's consent is now supplying Scheringwith this valve for use with Proventil and other products. This extension of the market for the Vertolin valve should result in a substantial increase in Bespek a sales.

There is no agreement between Glaxo or Schering and Bespak requiring either Glaxo or Schering to purchase valves from Bespak but the Directors consider it most unlikely that any other suitable valve could be made available to Glaxo or Schering by another manufacturer for at least several years. Although the patents covering the design of the special valve used with Verticin have expired, there are certain special features and elements of technical expertise involved in the valve's manufacturer which, the circular consider, would make it an extremely difficult product to copy. In addition, the special valve is the only one which has been officially approved both in the United Kingdom and in the United States, as well as widely throughout the rest of the world, for dispensing Ventolin and any alternative valve produced would be required to undergo a long period of testing and approval by manufacturers and regulatory authorities before it could be substituted for the Bespak valve.

Future developments

As mentioned above, the potential market for Ventolin and Proventii in the United States is very large and even if those products obtain only a small share of the market, Sespek's sales of valves to Glass and Schering should increase substantially. The Directors also foresee growing United Kingdom and export sales to other pharmaceutical companies of Bespak's range of metering valves suitable for inhalation therapy products.

Another United States market which the Directors believe has substantial potential is that for aerosol fire edinguishers incorporating Bespak valves and handles. Approvals for these fire extinguishers are being sought from appropriate testing bodies and it is articipated that the granting of these would result in a substantial increase in sales.

In furtherance of its expension into the United States the Company has recently incorporated Bespak, Inc. as a wholly owned subsidiary and this company has acquired an option to purchase a site of approximately 38 acres in North Carolina on which it plans to construct a purpose built fectory to house the Group's American operation so that it can more easily and efficiently service that market.

The Company is experiencing continuing growth in sales of perturns valves and rela Into company is experienting growth in season per units valves and reased services in europe and is at an advanced stage in the development of lower toost metering valve systems for less demanding non-ethical explications while continually seeking areas into which it can diversity by making use of its existing precision moutaing technology and marketing and engineering expertise. The Company's substantial research and development effort will continue to be used to explore possibilities for increasing stees by meeting requests from customers for special products or for variations on existing products but these are only manufactured in cases where the return to the Company is expected to be adequate.

Premises

The Company owns the freehold of a site of approximately 7.7 acres on the North Lynn Industrial Estate, King's Lynn, Nortok on which it has three buildings. The Company moved into two factory buildings on this site in 1975, one of which was a 20,000 square feet rented building on a site of approximately 3.3 acres and the other of which was a 25,000 square feet building constructed for the Company on an adjoining site of approximately 4.4 acres, the freshold of which had previously been bought by Bespek. The freshold of the rented property was acquired in 1979 and in 1980 the Company moved into an additional building of 45,000 square feet erected for it to a design incorporating various innovations which have produced a more pleasant and efficient working environment feeding to a greater integration of production and administrative functions. This statest building houses assembly operations, quality control, maintenance, main stores and despatch and most of the management and office staff. The 25,000 square feet building houses the injection-moulding and tool making departments and the 20,000 square feet building accommodates the research and development department.

The Directors consider that this site is capable of carrying at least a further 40,000 square feet of buildings in satisfactorily landscaped surroundings and have already put in hand site clearance preparatory to the erection of an extension to the factory.

Management and staff

Mir. R. E. Dexter, aged 63, is the non-executive Chairman of the Company and an Industrial Adviser to Hambros, having previously been Chief Executive of the Sanitas Group. He joined Bespak as a Director in 1988, when Hambros first became involved in the Company, and was appointed Chairman in 1978.

Mr. A. A. Schumann, aged 44, joined the Company as Production Manager in 1989 after managerial experience with Bord Limited and ITT Data Services. He was appointed to the Board in 1970 and has been Managing Director since 1974. Mr. G. E. H. Begley, aged 44, joined the Company in 1968 as the Company's accountant. He was appointed Finance Director in 1974 and is responsible for all aspects of the Group's financial attains and administration.

Mr. P. J. Dunne, aged 38, joined the Company in 1974 as a sales executive and was subsequently promoted to sales manager before being appointed Marketing Director in 1981. Mr. L. J. Klags, aged 54, joined the Company in 1964 as the works foremen and was subsequently promoted to assembly manager, production manager and manufacturing manager before being appointed Manufacturing Director in 1981.

Mr. L. A. Saunders, aged 49, joined the Company in 1990 as Engineering Director following senior management experience with several companies including ITT Cannon Electric and a subsidiary of Lockheed Corporation. Mr. M. A. Schumann, aged 41, joined the Company in 1970 following managerial experience with Balfour Beetty Limited and Cementation Limited. He was appointed a Director in 1979 and is responsible for development of the Company's land and buildings and for long term planning.

Mr. W. E. Warren, aged 59, was Managing Director of the Company between 1963 and 1974 and is now a non-executive Director and part-time consultant to the Company.

The Company employs approximately 260 people, all of whom are based in King's Lynn. Of these stumately 140 are employed in production (including Bertapa), 60 in engineering (including Bestech), 30 in see and administration, 20 in research and development and 10 in sales and marketing.

The Board is supported by a strong management fearn and there is a well developed structure for consultation and decision making. All relations between management and employees are conducted through the Bespek Employees' Council and labour relations are excellent. There are three fully funded retirement bariefit schemes in operation for the weekly and monthly paid employees, all of which are non-contributory.

Dividends

It is the Company's intention to pay dividends twice yearly split as to approximately 40 per cent. in February as an interim dividend and as to the remaining 60 per cent. in October as a final dividend.

Accounting policies

(ii) Basis of consolidation The consolidated acco consistency of the consolidated accounts incorporate the accounts of Bespek and its two wholly owned subsidianes, Bertapa Engineering Co. Limited ("Bertapa") and B.E.S. Technology Limited ("Bestech") Bespak ecquired a holding of 50 per cent in Whitelight Engineering Limited ("Whitelight") in February, 1982. The Directors consider this investment to be in the nature of a trade investment and the results of Whitelight have been excluded on the grounds of immakinglity.

(iii) Turnover Turnover comprises the invoice value of goods and services, excluding VAT and intra-group transactions.

(M) Depreciation
The cost of fixed assets, excluding motor vehicles, is written of an equal monthly instalments over their ex-

Freehold buildings — 50 years Freehold building services — 10 to 20 years Tooling — 3 years
Plant and equipment — 3 to 7 years
Licences and patents — 5 years

The Costs and striputable overheads of self-manufactured assets are capitalised as they are incurred. When the asset is commissioned the lotal cost of the asset is transferred to the appropriate asset category after writing off any costs or displayment asset in the costs of the Directory valuation of the asset.

(vi) Here purchase contracts and leasing agreements Assets acquired under hite purchase contracts and linancial leases are capitalised and depreciation is applied olicit the useful hite of the asset. Finance charges are recognised on an actuarial basis.

Stocks and work in progress

Stocks and work in progress are stated at the lower of cost and net realisable value. Cost comprises the direct cost of production and the attributable portion of all overheads appropriate to tocation and condition and is calculated using the first in first out method.

(viii) Plasearch and development Expenditure on research and development is written off in the year in which it is incurred

(is) Delarred Immbon Provision is made for taxishon, using the Sabirty method, on short-term timing differences and all other majored timing differences which are not expected to continue in the foreseeable future

(x) Contributors to pension funds. The Group makes contributions to various pensions and life assurance plans. The contributions are made to a funded scheme, the assets of which are held by trustees and kept separate from those of the Group. Contributions are based on the most recent valuation of the fund which is prepared annually.

(xi) Foreign currencies Asserts and liabilities expressed in foreign currencies at the balance sheet date are translated into sterling at the rates of exchange ruling on that date. Translation differences, and differences arrang on the trading activities of the Group, have been dealt within the proof and loss account.

(xii) Investment grants investment grants on capital expenditure are treated as reducing the cost of the acquisition of the relevant asset by the amount of the grant. 2. from £179m to £163m and with no let-up in the depressed trading conditions of Nigeria, a similar sort of shortfall could well have been repeated in the second three months.

Brokers are looking for firsthalf profits of about £360m against £378m in the corresponding period of 1982. Exchange rates have been against the group and traditionally unspecified exceptional items taken above the line are believed to have been higher.

COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL

However, with the situation in the United States improving all the time, analysis expect the group to make up the shortfall during the second half to give full-year profits of between £725m and £770m against £724 last time.

Last week Commercial Union reported figures below and General Accident above expectations. So interim results from Royal Insurance are going to be watched keenly tomorrow. The difficulty in assessing the effect of bad weather on the underwriting result has led to a period but nevertheless higher than Royal would think normal. Underwriting losses in the US are inevitably going to be bigger but analysis are expecting some improvement in the UK and company chairman says are current carrying levels", which brokers expect to be roughly the winter holiday period. Of more last year will have damaged significance will be what the margins in a period of little volume growth and brokers expect profits for the year as a whole to fall from £14.3m last time to between £12.5m and The pound's strength against £13.5m.

ECONOMIC VIEW

Looking for the M1 reaction than even revised expectations and MI growth during the rest of August is also expected to show signs of slowing. There is still concern that US interest rates will eventually move higher but the encouraging money supply figures have at least raised hopes that the next upward movement can be delayed.

The reaction of financial markets to last Friday's better-than-expected US money supply figures will be keenly awaited this week. The rise of $400m in MI was much less last week.

This, in turn, could lead to and the upward trend in US rates, but any sign of these potential problems abating is likely to be welcomed by British financial markets.

Important economic statistics

And a more stable or weaker relief to European countries which have seen their own currencies fall sharply against the dollar despite costly attempts at intervention.

Britain has so far largely escaped the impact of the dollar's remarkable recent surge

Important economic statistics due this week include July dollar would certainly come as a provisional retail sales today and building society monthly figures tomorrow. The June average earnings figures on Wednesday are expected to show almost no change in the index between May and June to leave the underlying rates about the group from takeover by banning bids from Sunligh Service Group and Initial Services on the grounds that they would lead to a reduction of competition and a loss of Price increases and better volumes have combined to boost margins on the dry cleaning side while the US is expected to have produced a small profit this year against losses in 1982. In addition volume on the industrial workwear rental side of the group is said to be picking up once more after several years of decline.

Friday sees full-year results from Waring and Gillow, the furniture and carpet retailer whose shares ride a roller coaster of takeover speculation. Last March the group said it had received an approach which might lead to a bid just days after reporting a half-year loss before tax of £777,000. The company has never said what became of the approach.

Jones visits the canvas for the first time in his career

Thomas lashes out at Jones verdict

S-450,000. Colin Jones, of Gorseinon in Wales, was not surprisingly a bitterly disappointed fellow.

On the one hand, after what must surely have been the hottest afternoon's work of his life, he had acquitted himself in more than honourable fashion under the canopted furnace of the Dunes Hottel stadium and deserved his rich reward. On the other, it was Milton McCrory, a lean, speedy bover from Detroit, where they are now turning out championship contenders with the alacrity of assembly-line cars. the alacrity of assembly-line cars, who has faid claim to the World Boxing Council welterweight cham-pronship belt, once the property of Sugar Ray Leonard.

Saturday night televised contest must have noted, it was so close - a split decision, to be precise - and the streets of South Wales must have echoed into the wee small hours of Sunday with that familiar we was robbed" anthem.

I must agree, for my eard gave Jones a two-point edge over McCrory. One judge, Ancimo Escobedo, from Venezuela, gave it to McCrory 115 to 111; Judge Ray Solis, from Mexico, scored it 115 to 114 while the third judge, Angel Tovar, of Panama, had Jones winning by 115 to 114.

Minutes after it was all over. Jones muttered a few words of congratulations to the new champinn and sobbed into a tower - part frustration, part anger and part disappointment, Later, nursing a beer at the hotel poolside in cooler temperatures of only 85°F - the bout was held in heat of around 107° - he listened as his manager Eddie Thomas, who has come close to the mountain top with other boxers, aid pasionately: "I'm outraged. The verdict stank and so did the

Jones also thought the crown was his and said he had performed better than in Reno last March when he drew with McCrory for the vacant title. "I thought I'd won", he said. "McCrory worked well for four rounds and he galloped and ran for the rest. From the seventh onwards I felt I was the only one in the Round seven was his big one, his left began to connect with ferocious force and his body punches found their target. McCrory's face was masked in blood from his nose and mouth and the bout turned dramatically for Jones. He was in complete command. You could almost hear the screams of joy from Wales as he thumped and punished McCrory. There is talk of Jones retiring from the ring. "At 26 I want them out, specially a fighter who has had three or four fights like this.". Thomas said, "I always felt that about my fighters – I want them out before they are knocked about too late run to deleat L'Emprant a length and a half in yesterday's one-mile Prix Jacques le Marois here.

Millfontaine and Gay Lemur reproduced their Goodwood form almost to within an ounce to finish first and third in the ATS Trophy. Agarenty Millfontaine and the ATS Trophy. Robert Sangster's South Atlantic, purchased as a yearling for a European record price of 640,000 the ATS Trophy. Aparently Million-taine was his owner Stavros Niarchos's ninety-fifth winner in England and France this season, which is not a bad strike rate, even allowing for the fact that he now has more horses in training in a year than you or I have hot dinners.

This daughter of Be My Guest, has changed out of all recognition since she had been raced on firm ground and on straight courses. Just Noalcoholic led up the centre of the course, followed by Crystal Glitters, Ma Biche and Luth Enchantee. On the rails L'Emigrant led Montekin and Bold Run two furlongs out. Alfred Gibert produced Crystal Giliters on the outside of Noalcoholic, and the pair looked certain to be involved in the force certain to be involved in the finish. However Maurice Philipperon produced Luth Enchantee on the wide outside and the filly showed a magnificent turn of foot to defeat L'Emigrant by a length and a half, with Montekin, two lengths away third in front of Ma Biche and Noskoholie.

Jacko Cunnington will probably next run Luth Enchantee in the group one Prix du Moulin de Longchamp on September 4. Gavin Pritchard-Gordon considered the ground far too firm for Noalcoholic and thought the stewards should have an inquiry when Luth have an inquiry when Luth Enchantee veered across his horse 300 yards from the post. He remarked: "Today's ground was like a road surface, and I hope Noalcoholic is not hurt. If all is well, he will go for the Waterford Crystal, but will end his racing career with the Challenge Stakes at New-market."

The Times Guide to career training

A crisis could shape a career

rejoice at the achievement or required

Despite the efforts of careers eachers and advisers, the six weeks following the results are a bediam of crisis and uncertainty. What could be an orderly adjustment to a sensible contingency plan often ends up as panic and rout as parents scramble to find alternatives for their offspring.

Although the UCCA system works tolerably well for university admissions. arrangements in other extors of higher education could hardly have been worse planned. With a lack of coordination which effectively encourages students to behave irresponsibly in their applications, there is no sure way of knowing which places are going to be filled, particularly at polytechnics, until the first day of term. Consequently many students are tempted to grab and hold on to more than one offer thereby making a difficult situation éven more confused than it need be. When it comes to crude numbers things are definitely tighter.

Unfortunately things are definitely tighter this year than they have been for a long time. The grades required by admissions tutors in their conditional offers have gone up - often, it would seem, by several points (where an A counts for five points and an E for one). At the University of Surrey, for example, a number of courses (including their much prized prestige Degree in Home Economics) have been closed down. The total of places generally has reduced and the number of Appli-

The next six weeks can be a time of crisis and uncertainty for A level candidates who have not done well. In a series of four articles, Edward Fennell advises on how to make the best of a disappointin g start in higher education.

selection has become more stringent. It could be argued that this is all to the good and that it was about time calibre of students in higher education was raised so as to slice off the mediocre. It is an argument which is raging already especially as A level results have been shown to be no predictors of final degree class. In any case there is a realistic claim that as a country we need to raise to a high standard as many young people as - even the mediocre. but meanwhile the immediate problem is how best to manipulate the system so as to get on a course which is going to be of long term benefit.

higher education is necessarily the best thing. In a number of career areas these days it may well be better to get in post-A' level, when less maybe expected and the competition may not be as tough, rather than delaying three or four years only to be in a mêlee with thousands of other fresh graduates. So when revising your plans the key decision has to be whether higher education is really

When you make your decision, you need to make a quick excursion around the available options. You may well want to make use of UCCA clearing but only a minority are likely to be successful there. Instead the time has come to delve into the world of polytechnics in Northern manufac-turing towns, into the Higher National Diplomas of the Business and Technician Education Council, and the Diplomas in Higher Education - all of which entitle the students to mandatory awards and are fully part of the higher education provision.

Fortunately there are people available to help. Each year the Department of Education and Science coordinates the Advanced and Further Education Information Service (AFEIS) which provides up-to-date details of where vacancies are still on offer. Regular bulletins are sent out to Local Advisory Officers, numbering this year more than a thousand, who will be operating mostly from the offices of Local Education Authority Careers Services. To get access to this vacancy information and to have an advisory interview all you need do is to contact the local Careers Service for an appointment.

If there is any consolation at all in undertaking a rethink of plans following A level then it is that it provides an opportunity to take stock of medium to long-term career goals. Because of the changes in the employment market, the tightness and competitivness of traditional professions like the law, and the problems encountered by pure arts and social science graduates, it could well be that it is a better long-term bet to take a less fashionable degree or diploma course which is well-rooted in the real world and has good links, through sandwich or industrial placements, with industry or com-

 Two aspects of war, unfortunately overlapping each other tonight. THE ZHIBABWE TAPES (Radio 4, 8.00 pm), David Caute's drama documentary, is set amid the wer over Rhodesia/Zimbabwe between 1978 and 1980, it concerns the role of propaganda and the refraction of truth. Peter Jeffrey plays a white farmer captured by Robert Mugabe's guerillas and forced to record their armed struggle, to recountered his previous propaganda broadcasts, interestingly, most of the sound inserts in the play were actually taped by the author during the war, and catalogue the experiences of villagers and 'freedom fighters'. The National Theatre's John Matshikiza plays the rilla Commander Victory, while Nigel Graham speaks the narration.

MONDAY AUGUST 15 1983

By Kenneth Gosling
When the photographers of the Great Western Railway went out with their plate cameras at the turn of the century they brought back not only pictures of trains, stations and newly-appointed station-masters but a unique record of life in town and country. Their glass negatives gathered dust in hundreds of boxes stored at Paddington station. west London. Little of their work appeared on seaside posters or as views in railway carriages.

Now Mr Alan Brock, a photographic consultant, has begun cataloguing and proces-sing a quarter of a million retrieved storage as part of a joint venture by British Rail and the Oxford Publishing Company.

Mr Brock, aged 52, had rwice been made redundant when he heard of the collection. His task could last many years and it is bound to add immeasurably to pictorial knowledge of British life between the late 1880s and the

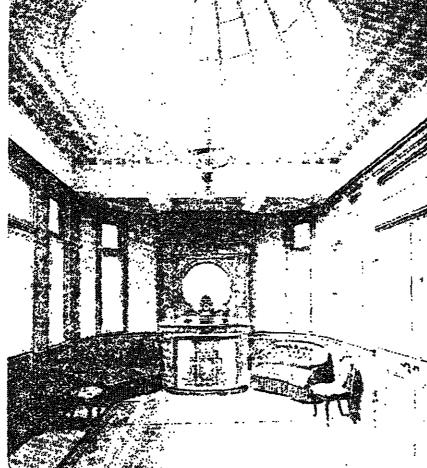

The pictures include many that are not identified because photographers did not list them.

The ladies having a chat look Weish but Mr Brock cannot be certain: the railway ganger on his self-propelled trolley is certainly vintage 1900: and there is no dispute that the magnificently decor-ared and furnished apartment was once Queen Victoria's official station waiting room at Windsor.

Mr Brock has already produced subject lists of many categories in the collection. From one ledger alone be produced 10.000 items.

His lists are available to anyone who cares to send him a stamped self addressed envelope to 392 Holdenhurst Road. Bournemouth, Dorset.

Letter from Moscow

Andropov breaks with the seaside routine Where do Russian leaders 1823, and produces the only go in summer? The traditional drinkable Russian mineral answer is the Black Sea, although in this (25 in other things) Mr Andropov seems to have a style of his own.

The first elite dachas at Sochi were built at the turn of the century. The Tsar's pseudo-Renaissance palace at Livadia. along the coast at Yalia, was completed in 1911. It served as the site of the 1945 Yalia conference, no doubt because Stalin liked the climate (even Khrushchev preferred palm-fringed Pitsunda, on the Georgian Black Sea coast, but Brezhnev moved the Kremlin's summer headquarters back to the Crimea, and spent many an August sailing, sunbathing and receiving foreign guests at Oreanda, looking for all the world like one of President Nixon's less arrows business commander. savoury business companions, in his windcheater and dark glasses. Each new Soviet leader always finds fault with his summertime arrangements, so that the whole paraphernalia of presi-dential communications, including the hotline to the White House, has to be carted off to some new specially-equipped dacha. Mr Andropov has full access the Politburo Crimean dachas. But he seems to prefer to spend his leisure time (when he has any) in the his native Caucasus.

Mr Andropov has a new and fully-equipped dacha just outside Moscow, so that he can enjoy the woods and the Moscow River while being able to dash down to the Kremlin in a convoy of black limousines if the need arises. He also has a presidential flat not far from the city centre, on the same street as The Times office, but does not often use it, possibly because it now bears a plaque saying. "Leonid Ilyich Brezhnev lived

But when the sun sparkles above the mountain lakes and meadows of the Caucasus, Mr Andropov is drawn to the spa of Kislovodsk, about 3,000 ft above sea level. Kislovodsk is not far from the Soviet leader's birthplace in the Stavropol region.

It has long been a centre for the treatment of nervous and cardiac disorders, not to mention kidney complaints and diabetes, all of which sounds like a summary of Mr Andropov's last check-up.
The spa was founded in water, called Narzan. At the exclusive sanatorium at Red Stones (so named because of the red sandstone formations; there are also grey stones and blue stones) VIPs can take a rest cure while gazing at a backcloth of snow-capped peaks and mountain greenery.

Or they can take the waters at the spa, with its English Gothic revival (1849) and Indian imperial (1903) style buildings.

Both the spas in the Caucasus and the beach resorts of the Black Sea are popular with less clevated Russians, although the accommodation and service are somewhat less exclusive. In Russia there is question of checking into the hotel of your choice. Factories and offices across the Soviet Union issue "houses of rest" and sanatoria.

The conditions may be sparse, but pulyovkas are much sought after, and holidaymakers say they live like kings for a few weeks compared to the drudgery of their Most Russians expect their leaders to live well and do not seem to resent ostentatious privilege (not aloud at any

As they sunbathe at Suchi and Sukhumi, Soviet holiday-makers are aware that their leaders enjoy a more luxurious lifestyle behind well-guarded walls, but say there is not much they can do about it and admit they would probably do the same if they were in

In this sense, Mr Andropov, while satisfyingly stern and disciplinarian over public policy, is rather disappointingly austere and spartan in private life. Russians indentify rather more with Brezhnev. who unashamedly enjoyed the good life.

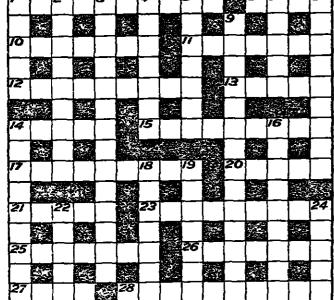

Not long before he died he invited a foreign communist leader to his Crimean dacha and sat with him on the vast and otherwise empty beach. Drinking cognac brought out by the dacha servants and listening to dissident songs on a portable gramophone. Brezhnev was observed by a Moscow intellectual who was holidaying on a VIP beach near by.

It is difficult to imagine the Narzan-sipping Mr Andropov either getting mellow on the beach over a bottle of cognac or allowing anyone to get close enough to watch him.

Nature notes

Herons still stand on their nests though their young are fully grown and can only be distinguished by their grey heads and rudimentary crests. Sometimes a flock of 10 or 12 crests. Sometimes a flock of 10 or 12 will set off to feed together, they call to each other with a duck-like quack, rather than the usual deep honk of a solitary bird. Lapwings are beginning to arrive from the Continent: the first flocks consist mainly of young birds who have set off ahead of their parents. Starlings wheel in the air like swallows, in pursurit of flying insects. Blackbirds are moulting: they look like worn velvet cushions.

ln the hedges, bernes are rip ening. Most hawthorn berries are sull apple-green, but some have a dark-red flush. There is a wash of orange on the rowan berries; the poisonous berries of bittersweet, or woody nightshade, are already a brilliant scarlet. Conker shells are like pale green decorations on the dark foliage of the horse chestnut trees; on the ashes, the yellow seeds. or keys, are as bright as a new crop of flowers. Gipsywort has grown very tall this year, with bracelets of white blo ssom all the way up the DJM
